The King And Queen Arrive In Capital

Arriving in Washington, the King and Queen were escorted from the Royal train by Secretary of State Hull to the reception room in the station where President Franklin D. Roosevelt and other dignitaries waited to greet Their Majesties upon their arrival in the capital of the United States.

Ceremony At Capital Is Brilliant

WASHINGTON, June 9—King George VI., who reigns over the "Mother of Parliaments" at Westminster, today met the members of the United States legislative body in the huge, high-domed rotunda of Washington's capitol.

With Queen Elizabeth at his side, smiling and genial, the King shook hands with 400 U. S. Senators and Members of the House of Representatives.

The brilliant reception, demonstrating anew the international friendship pledged last night at a state dinner by King George and President Roosevelt, took place less than 100 yards from where victorious British troops held a mock legislative session in the House chamber 125 years ago and then sacked and burned the capitol.

The King and Queen had a smile and a hand-shake for every one of the American legislators.

Senator Borah First To Meet Rulers

Seventy-four-year-old Senator W. E. Borah (Rep., Idaho), dean of the senate, and an outspoken isolationist, was the first, other than the reception committee, to meet the King and Queen after they were escorted inside by a reception committee headed by Senator Key Pittman (Dem., Nevada), chairman of the foreign relations committee.

The King and Queen first were greeted at the door of the rotunda by Vice-President John Garner and Speaker William Bankhead.

King George chatted with Senator Pittman until the reception got under way.

On the Capitol plaza, blazing under a hot sun, thousands cheered the arrival of the Royal visitors. Although the top was up on the car in which they rode, the Queen carried the parasol which had shielded her from the sun during yesterday's tumultuous reception.

Scores of women who awaited in the reserved section in front of the capitol also had brought parasols to protect them from the scorching sun, but police forced them to put these away to permit those behind to see the Royal arrival.

One by one the red, yellow, blue, green and white parasols which had blossomed in the plaza all morning like a field of flowers, were closed, revealing a vast seated throng of 3,500 persons, most of them wives and relatives of Congress members.

The Royal car swung into the capitol plaza at 12:00 p.m., E.D.T., from the British embassy, where the King and Queen had chatted with the members of the British colony.

KING ALIGHTS FIRST

When the Royal car reached the foot of the capitol steps, the King alighted first, followed by the Queen.

After shaking hands with the waiting Congressional committee, they were escorted to the second landing of the steps, where they paused briefly for photographs.

First Reigning British Monarch Ever To Visit Confines Of United States

The first reigning British monarch to ever visit the United States, the King is pictured here with President Roosevelt as they drove from Washington's Union station to the White House. The route through which the Royal party travelled was lined with troops and tanks as cheering thousands cheered themselves hoarse in welcoming Canada's King to the capital of the United States.

Queen Impresses Her Hostess, Mrs. Roosevelt In Keen Understanding

By THOS. WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 9.—"For one so young I was impressed by her complete understanding of those conditions which push people to desperation. She also impressed me very much with her keen sense of the conditions under which a great many people live and labor today."

Thus Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, wife of the President, summed up today her opinion of Queen Elizabeth. Mrs. Roosevelt presided at her usual press conference at which the press women travelling with the Royal press train were invited as well as the Washington women writers.

Her Majesty was not present at the conference, but later as the press women lined the corridor the King and Queen strolled through and the writers were presented. No questions were asked of Their Majesties.

Asked about the effect of the Royal visit, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "It seems to me of a very great value. In the first place it gives people an opportunity of seeing the rulers of another country and learning what they stand for."

A press woman asked Mrs. Roosevelt what opportunity the Queen would have to see the desperate conditions under which some people live in the United States. Mrs. Roosevelt answered that Her Majesty would not have any opportunity, but she had a great gift for asking pertinent questions and garnering information.

MRS. ROOSEVELT

The interview took place in the Green Room at the White House. The press women asked a number of personal questions about Her Majesty which Mrs. Roosevelt declined to answer.

Asked what she would do if the Queen could stay another day, Mrs. Roosevelt said she "would like to show her a CCC camp and a WPA project."

Words of Peace are Voiced on Thursday By King, President

British Rulers Start Second Day of Visit to Capitol—Will Honor Soldier Dead At Ceremony

By A. E. FULFORD
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Words of peace—voicing the hope of eternal friendship between the British Empire and the United States—re-echoed throughout the world today as King George and Queen Elizabeth started their second day in this city that outdid itself to welcome them.

The day's program includes a visit to the capitol to meet the senators and representatives, luncheon aboard the U.S.S. Potomac, a short stay at beautiful Mount Vernon where George Washington's hilltop home is perpetuated as a national shrine, and laying of wreaths on monuments honoring Canadian and American war dead.

Then will come a banquet at the British embassy in honor of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, followed after midnight by departure for the hustle and bustle of New York City. The royal pair spend Sunday in the quiet of President Roosevelt's Hyde Park, N.Y., estate.

RELATIONS CEMENTED

The King and the president last night cemented firmer Anglo-American relations when they spoke of British-American amity at a state dinner in the White House, set afire more than a century ago by British soldiery.

"I pray that our great nations may ever in the future walk together along the path of friendship in a world of peace," the King said, replying to a toast by the president.

"I trust and believe that in years to come the history of the United

Another provincial meeting will be held in the fall to promote plans for rehabilitation of tuberculosis patients, said an official of the Central Alberta Sanatorium here.

FLINT, Mich., June 9—United Auto Workers, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, crossed picket lines and went to work today in spite of a strike called by the Homer Martin U.A.W., an American Federation of Labor unit, in the Flint plants of General Motors Corporation.

A showdown was indicated for Monday, when the Martin forces plan to throw heavy picket lines around four plants of the Chevrolet division and two plants of the Fisher body company division. An effective strike covering these units would throw 20,000 men into idleness.

Washington newspapers were as enthusiastic about the visit as were the crowds that cheered the King and Queen wherever they appeared.

The Times-Herald, which banner-lined its front page with "City Goes Wild Over King," confessed to an editorial that "George and Elizabeth have most definitely got us."

In an editorial assuring Their Majesties they are "among

WASHINGTON, June 9—A 180-year-old real estate transaction served as a subject for conservation today between King George VI and Senator Ellison (Cotton Ed) Smith of South Carolina.

Smith, who attended the garden party at the British embassy, said he reminded the King that the land grant of the Smith plantation in South Carolina was signed in 1747 by King George II.

"And I told him I still had the grant and am still living on the land," Smith added.

The senator said he was presented to the King by Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador.

"I want you to meet Senator Smith of South Carolina," Smith quoted Sir Ronald as saying.

"Cotton Ed Smith?" he said the King inquired.

"I'll tell you that nickname has gone around the world," Smith commented.

No. 1 Wildcatters to Seek Black Gold in Pouce Coupe District

PITTSBURGH, June 9.—America's No. 1 wildcatters, Michael Benedum and Joe Trees, have inaugurated a quest for black gold in northern Canada.

The prospectors reported they have 250 square miles of land under lease near Pouce Coupe in British Columbia's Peace River block.

"Oil is empire," declared Benedum today on the eve of his 70th birthday. "This venture is more than just a business deal in oil. No one knows what's coming in the world. If the democracies come to grips with the totalitarian states, oil may well spell the difference between defeat and victory.

"And if we find oil up there in the north in great quantities, that oil may some day determine the mastery of the Pacific and the East."

Mike, as friends call him, and his "pard" first opened up the Caddo pool in Louisiana some 30 years ago —that brought them a $6,000,000 cheque from Standard Oil.

Then their wildcatting developed fields in Mexico, West Texas, Rumania and Colombia, pyramiding their bank accounts. There were dusters, too. Millions spent in the Philippines and China brought no oil.

Mike, who succeeded the late A. W. Mellon as Pittsburgh's wealthiest citizen, was asked why he didn't quit, he had made money enough.

"Listen," he replied, "I've enjoyed every minute of life. I've been in the oil business 30 years because I wanted to be in it. I still want to be in it and I'm going to stay in it."

Warm Welcome On Arrival

Mrs. Roosevelt, the President and his aide are shown here as they welcomed the Royal couple.

ALBERTA DEBT ADJUSTMENT ACT TO GO ON TRIAL

CALGARY, June 9. — McLaws, Redman and Company, Calgary barristers, today filed a statement in the trial division of the Alberta supreme court here to test validity of the Alberta Debt Adjustment Act.

The statement is a reply to a statement of defence filed by a client of the Atlas Lumber company. The client failed to meet a promissory note claiming protection of the Debt Adjustment Act.

The Calgary law firm, acting for the lumber company, in their statement state that the postponement was made in accordance with provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act of the federal government and therefore, the provincial Alberta government has no jurisdiction in the matter.

Tories To Merge With Socreds To Defeat Liberals

MELVILLE, Sask., June 9.—Following the lead of the Social Crediters Wednesday, the Melville federal constituency Conservatives in convention here Thursday did not nominate a candidate for the expected federal election. Instead, they formed a committee to meet Social Crediters and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation members with the intention of combining to run a unity candidate against the Liberal nominee when the time comes. Social Crediters in convention Wednesday started the unity move, and the C.C.F. at their convention on Saturday will be invited to join the coalition.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, is expected to be the Liberal nominee.

1936 Price of Milk Uncalled In Year 1939

CALGARY, June 9.—J. T. Shaw, K.C., representing Alderman R. H. Weir, today told Judge A. A. Carpenter, chairman of the board of public utility commissioners, at the milk inquiry here today that because the price of milk was raised to 11 cents in 1936 because of fodder shortage was no reason the price should still prevail.

However, R. H. M. Bailey, manager of the Alberta Milk Producers' Association, stated he did not believe a favorable June was sufficient to predict there would be a surplus of feed later in the year.

After summing of evidence by witnesses Judge Carpenter reserved his decision and the hearing was adjourned.

IRISHMAN IS SENTENCED TO 10-YEAR TERM

STIRLING, Scotland, June 9.—Terence McSherry, Irishman, was convicted today of stealing explosives to make bombs and was sentenced to prison for 10 years.

McCherry, one of four men convicted on the theft charges, had sought to place upon the British government the blame for recent bombings in England and Scotland because of its refusal to accede to an "ultimatum" by the illegal Irish Republican army.

The other—Francis McNeece, Samuel Kennedy and Matthew Somerville—were sentenced to terms of from 18 months to seven years.

Peace Words

States will continue to be marked by that ordered progress and by that prosperity which have been theirs in the past."

The President had said the United States and Great Britain made their principal contribution to civilization by showing international grievances could be settled peacefully. He pointed to settlement of the recent episode between Britain and the United States over ownership of Pacific islands and continued:

SURE FOUNDATION

"If this illustration of the use of methods of peace, divorced from aggression, could only be universally followed, relations between all countries could rest upon a sure foundation and men and women everywhere could once more look upon a happy, prosperous and a peaceful world."

The state dinner climaxed a day in which hundreds of thousands of Americans acclaimed Their Majesties. It was difficult to detect any difference between the welcomes they have received in their Kingdom of Canada and the United States that broke away from the rigid 150 years ago.

DEPTH OF LOYALTY

In Canada there was a depth of loyalty and love that brought tears and could not be duplicated in this foreign country. Otherwise there was nothing that differed from the Canadian welcomes except that Washington had more soldiers. Ten of armored trucks, machine guns sticking out of their fronts.

An afternoon garden party at the British embassy—following a hearty presidential welcome, a procession through the crowd-lined streets of Washington, down and up a sight-seeing tour—was the next event of the day at which Their Majesties mingled with hundreds of persons as they often did in Canada.

EXCLUSIVE DINNER

The state dinner was exclusive, confined to 40 guests, but 1,500 persons attended the garden party and every last one who could possibly manage a presentation was presented.

To save time and wear and tear the King took one route through the British Embassy grounds and the Queen another. They were separated for more than an hour, their longest public separation since they reached Canada.

Senators, congressmen, members of the diplomatic corps and the other lucky ones who were invited moved about the embassy garden seeking a place where they could catch the eye of Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador, or one of his aides and receive the coveted presentation.

Those who didn't catch the eye of Sir Ronald or his aides in the first attempt skirted the crowds and moved in a position where they could not be missed again. Some were, and there were many disappointed persons in Washington today.

G-MEN IN EVIDENCE

G-men stuck out like sore thumbs around the garden. They wore neither morning clothes nor linen suits—the garb prescribed by Lady Lindsay recently—and their appearance at each entrance and every possible exit, including the bridges, was noticeable. They stayed on duty long after the latest guest had left and saw that the last newspaperman had departed from the grounds.

The garden party was, for Washington's elite, the event of the day. The beautiful grounds—four acres of England—of the $1,000,000 embassy were filled with notables who never jostled each other but did all they could politely to move nearer the King and Queen.

His Majesty, recognizing the name of some one who had been presented, would stop and chat for a while.

LONG TALKS

He had rather long talks with Admiral Richard Byrd, the Antarctic explorer, and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who said later she had "Known him since he was a lad, and all his family, too."

He and the Queen met about 150 persons each and smiled through all the handshaking despite Washington's heavy heat. Later they had tea under the embassy portico with J. P. Morgan, the banker.

The Queen looked a trifle sunburned during her Washington stay, but her clear complexion drew exclamations from capital belles. Neither she nor the King seemed to mind the heat.

During the morning His Majesty wore the heavy uniform of an admiral of the fleet. In the afternoon he wore formal morning clothes and a grey top hat and, despite his long walk, seemed cool, while others at the garden party mopped their brows every minute.

ACCLAIMED BY 500,000

The garden party and the state dinner topped a day in which Their Majesties were acclaimed by 500,000 Washingtonians and their visitors. In a temperature of 89 degrees they drove around miles of the city and watched people packed six-deep at the curbs and crushed together along side streets for a block acclaim inside.

They had luncheon at the White House with the Roosevelt family, Miss Franklin Junior, Elliott and James—two were in the garden party but kept in the background—and later took a sight-seeing drive through the city before going to the garden party.

Two Pin-Points On Map Symbol Of Amity

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Two pin-points on the map of the Pacific became today a symbol of Anglo-American amity.

The islands—Canton and Enderbury—were referred to by President Roosevelt in his toast to the King at the White House dinner last night.

"Two small uninhabited islands in the centre of the Pacific," the President said, "became of sudden interest to the British Empire and to the United States as stepping-stones for commercial airplanes between America and Australasia. Both nations claimed sovereignty. Both nations had good cases."

SOLUTION FOUND

He went on to say that a long-drawn-out controversy could have been brought ill will and have delayed use of the islands by either nation. A solution finally was found by the joint use of both islands by both nations, with the question of sovereignty deferred for 50 years.

Mr. Roosevelt commented that if this example "could only be universally followed, relations between all countries would rest upon a sure foundation, and men and women everywhere could once more look upon a happy, prosperous and peaceful world."

The islands are members of the Phoenix group of eight, nearly in the centre of the Pacific, about 1,700 distance south of the equator.

friends," the Evening Star spoke of America's "spontaneous expression of joy over the opportunity to proffer the hand of friendship to a sterling young people who so ideally symbolize the British Commonwealth of Nations and its indisguised desire for fraternity with the other branch of the English-speaking race."

"Welcome, Your Majesty," said the New York Daily News (Democrat) in an open letter to His Majesty, appearing in editions of this morning's paper.

"We hope that you and the gracious lady who is your wife may enjoy every moment of your stay here . . . that you will be as pleased to see the millions of Americans who will shout, wave and sing greetings to you as they will be pleased to get a glimpse of you.

"The general opinion at the present time is that Your Majesty is O.K.—an American expression conveying the highest admiration and esteem. The Queen, too, is generally considered O.K. So, welcome again, Your Majesties."

CITY SERGEANT WELL-INFORMED SIGN LANGUAGE

Sergeant George Edwards, of the city police force talks with a broad Scotch burr, but that isn't the total list of his accomplishments in a linguistic way.

Friday morning the genial male presented himself at police headquarters in search of information. To the amazement of newsmen, Sergeant Edwards just spelled out and carries on a lengthy conversation with the youth by talking sign language. "I learned it when I was a kid and it has come in handy several times since," Sergeant Edwards explained.

It was 92 in the shade when the King and Queen rode with President and Mrs. Roosevelt from Union station to the White House. One man in the surging throng collapsed and died, and nearly 200 required first aid treatment.

Half a hundred or more persons who had paid $5 each for engraved tickets to choice seats atop the roof of the White House for the parade were disappointed to learn the building owner knew nothing of the tickets—that they were good only for memories of a swindler's success.

Hawkers did a brisk business peddling, for 25 cents each, boxes and vegetable crates — anything spectators could stand on to get over those in front. One urchin with a stepladder rented each rung for 15 cents and set atop the ladder himself.

THORSBY FARMER BURNS TO DEATH WHILE SLEEPING

THORSBY, June 9—Believed to have been smoking in bed and to have gone to sleep without extinguishing the cigarette, Garnet W. Clouston, 27, farmer of the Sunnybrook district, 11 miles west of Thorsby, was burned to death in a fire which swept his farm home early Thursday. The tragedy was discovered by Otto Wahl, a neighbor, Thursday afternoon.

Identification of Clouston's body was completed when relatives identified a deformed foot.

Mrs. Clouston and their two small children were not at home at the time of the fire. Mrs. Clouston was teaching school at Creekland, 15 miles from Thorsby, while the children, one two years old and the other three weeks, were staying with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Calloway of this district.

Mr. and Mrs. Clouston had been married for about three years. Mr. Clouston came to Thorsby from the Peace River district, just previous to his marriage. He was born in Calgary.

RYLEY FARMER GETS JUDGMENT IN DEBT CASE

Judgment was given in district court Friday by His Honor Judge J. C. Crawford for $25 in favor of Julian Bradley Ryley, Ryley district farmer, against Andrew S. Shandro, Edmonton, being money deducted by Shandro as payment of the fee for appearing for the plaintiff in the formulation of a proposal under the terms of the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act.

Plaintiff's story was that he had agreed with Shandro that he should act for him before the official receiver in the formulation of a proposal, and that in the event of the matter coming before the board of review it should be represented by counsel. Corroborative evidence of this agreement was called by the plaintiff.

Mr. Shandro told the court the agreement was that the fee would be $50 as the case was an involved one, and that he had been paid $25 in cash and had taken the balance of his fee from a $300 grain cheque, given him to distribute amongst the farmer's creditors.

The court held that the agreement was for payment of $25 and that this was borne out by a statement issued to the plaintiff's solicitor by Mr. Shandro, in which a charge of $25 had been made for fee and disbursements. He gave judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed with costs of the action.

Scenes From Royal Show

WASHINGTON, June 9—Queen Elizabeth's beauty and the easy charm of "Our Noble King" George impressed Americans Thursday, just as it did Canadians. Enthusiastic Martha Strayer wrote in the Washington Daily News: "The Queen looks much, much lovelier than her picture, and the King is much more handsomer than his. Grave, too, and altogether as a young king should look."

Ceremony

Then they walked slowly into the rotunda.

Members of the senate entered the rotunda in a body at 11:40 a.m., E.D.T., led by Vice-President Garner. Senator Borah were formal morning clothes for the first time in years.

SPIRITED APPLAUSE

When Their Majesties appeared in the big circular chamber, the assembled legislators broke into spirited applause.

The King and Queen passed along a route marked out by purple plush ropes. Senators and representatives waiting to greet them were penned into separate groups behind other plush ropes to the centre of the rotunda.

Pittman stood at the King's left to introduce the senators. The Queen stood at the King's right. Next, and chatting frequently with her, was Mr. Garner in his inevitable rumpled formal morning attire.

BANKS OF FERNS

Their Majesties stood on a blue-green plush carpet. Behind them were banks of ferns and rows of palms. A runner of paper grass was laid next to the wall.

Across the frescoed chamber from the King and Queen were two mammoth paintings of British surrenders to American arms in the Revolutionary War—that of General Burgoyne at Saratoga, in 1777, and that of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown, in 1781.

Nearby was a statue depicting Thomas Jefferson holding a bronze scroll of the Declaration of Independence, and two statues of George Washington.

MARBLE STATUE

Behind them was a white marble statue of Edward Dickinson Baker, native of London, who became the first senator from Oregon.

When the senators had passed, house members stepped forward and Representative Sol Bloom (Dem., New York), performed the introductions.

Representative Joseph Mansfield (Dem., Texas), in the wheel chair he has used for years, was the first house member to greet the King and Queen. A ripple of applause broke forth as he shook hands with both, and the Queen, leaning over to add a word of greeting, told him she recalled seeing him yesterday at the British embassy garden party.

"I bowed and scraped as best I could in my damn' wheel chair," the Texan said afterwards.

Representative William Miller (Rep., Connecticut) who lost both legs in the Great War, was wheeled to Their Majesties and chatted with them briefly.

NEGRO PRESENTED

Representative Arthur Mitchell, the only negro in congress, made a deep bow to each of Their Majesties.

The Queen chatted briefly also with Mrs. Caroline O'Day (Dem., New York), while Representative Zebulan Weaver (Dem., North Carolina) stopped and spoke several words to the King.

Despite air - conditioning, the chamber became warm enough to bring perspiration to many foreheads, but the King and Queen appeared cool and at ease. Tall Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador, stood behind them and frequently mopped his perspiring brow with a large white pocket handkerchief.

EXPRESSED APPRECIATION

When the last member had been presented, Their Majesties walked down the stone stairway to the marble floor.

Chairman Pittman of the reception committee said later the King and Queen desired his appreciation to congress in these words:

"Her Majesty and I are unable to express our appreciation of the universal courtesy and friendship we have received."

The Queen smiled at the hundreds of women jammed on either side of the corridor side, nodding first on one side and then the other, and waving gracefully with her right hand.

There was loud handclapping and many feminine "ohs" and "ahs" at the Queen's regal beauty.

DROVE TO NAVY YARD

Re-entering their car, the King and Queen drove to the navy yard to board President Roosevelt's yacht, Potomac, for a brief cruise and luncheon en route to Mount Vernon.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt awaited them. The president was in a white suit and a white straw hat. Mrs. Roosevelt wore a pink and black print crepe dress, and a black hat with pink flowers tucked under the rolled brim.

Lady Katharine Seymour, lady-in-waiting to the Queen, in a simple black and white print frock and a big black hat with a cut-out triangle at the back of her head which showed her brown bobbed hair, was with the Royalties.

King Lays Wreath On Tomb Of Washington

BY SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 9.—King George paused in solemn reverence today before this republic's foremost shrine to lay a wreath on the tomb of George Washington, who led 13 struggling colonies to independence from British rule 150 years ago.

The simple ceremony, on the grassy slopes of Mount Vernon, climaxed the second of two crowded days in the royal tour which have symbolized the peaceful ties of friendship between two English-speaking peoples who divided on the battlefield in 1776.

It followed an impressive visit by the King and Queen to the capitol where the King, in reigns over the "Mother of Parliaments" at Westminster, met America's legislature, and preceded a visit to Arlington cemetery, where His Majesty

Hearst Paper Says George VI Doing His "King Job" Well

NEW YORK, June 9.—"George VI, by his great charm and sincere interest in doing his 'king-job' well, has already won a warm welcome here that makes us forget we ever was a king named George III," said William Randolph Hearst's Daily Mirror in an editorial today.

"History will record that at 10:30 o'clock in the evening of June 7, 1939, an English king named George crossed into American soil from the British Dominion of Canada," said the Mirror. "And perhaps historians will say that no single sovereign has done any thing so important to the history of the British Empire since another King George—the third, he who—stubbornly crossed swords with American colonists more than a century and a half ago.

"Amateur historians may be permitted to speculate on this idea:

"Suppose King George III had been a nice fellow like George VI. We wonder if the United States of America would today be the British 'Dominion of America?'"

The Herald-Tribune (Republican) said:

"When Their Majesties crossed the border last night they brought with them the record of a personal triumph in Canada which will appeal to Americans even more strongly than the force of the symbolism which attaches to the British crown.

HIGH ESTIMATE

"Through the moving pictures and the radio—and perhaps most of all, through the eyes of our neighbors in Canada—Britain's country has already formed a high estimate of these royal visitors.

"A warm personal greeting, of admiration and liking, seems certain, therefore, to await Their Majesties in this republic of ours.

"May their stay on this alien but friendly soil be as happy and cloudless as every American will wish it to be."

REPRESENTS PEOPLE

The New York Times (Independent) stressed that the King represents all "the peoples of England—not merely Mr. Chamberlain or parliament but also the men and women in shops, stores, factories and mines, on farms, in millions of homes set in the ancient sea, from which so many of our traditions have come.

"What can all the peoples of England say to us?" the paper asked. "They can say, regardless of party, that they want no war, intend to commit no aggression and look to us for such sympathy and such help as are consistent with our own interests and our own traditions. The royal visit carries this message to us.

"What can we say in return? The least, surely, is that we stand together on fundamentals, whatever our opinions as to transient policies. The mind of us, on both sides of the water, stand firm in our longing for a world in which there shall be assurance of peace and in which the spirit of man shall have room to grow toward a creative freedom."

Highway Work Progresses After Delay By Rainfall

Delayed by recent rains, highway surfacing in widely separated parts of the province is progressing satisfactorily, according to provincial highways department officials.

Starting at Stony Plain workmen have commenced laying a "blotter" course of treatment on the Jasper highway. Interrupted by rain, this work was resumed Thursday. The crew is working eastward from Stony Plain toward this city.

Improvements of the highway from Stony Plain to Carvell Corner is being carried on by public works department, gravelling of a 15-mile stretch in the Carrot Creek section is almost finished.

Between Edmonton and Crossfield, surfacing operations are under way and these are likely to be extended north of Crossfield the next week, providing weather remained favorable.

A "seal coat" top dressing is being applied by two crews operating between Waterton and Okotoks.

Appeal Is Filed

Appeal was filed Thursday by C. H. Gordon, K.C., on behalf of Harry Sills, Edmonton railway employee, against judgment of Mr. Justice A. F. Ewing awarding $476 to George H. Saywell and his son George for injuries received in 1937 in an accident on 118 avenue last fall.

laid a wreath on another great shrine of this country, that of the unknown soldier.

VISIT TO C.C.C. CAMP

Sandwiched in between was a brief visit to a Civilian Conservation Corps camp at Fort Hunt, Va., where Their Majesties saw the work which the conservation is doing to provide employment for America's jobless youth.

The wreath-laying ceremony at Mount Vernon, in the broad afternoon sunlight, was a scene filled with historic perspectives and implications. As His Majesty moved forward with the floral tribute, white lilies, iris and carnations—and placed it against the marble sarcophagus, he honored a great U.S. president who 150 years ago was a rebel leader driving from this country the red-coated armies of his ancestor, George III.

The wreath bore a ribbon of royal red and blue inscribed "From George R.I. and Elizabeth."

GARDEN PARTY IS HIGHLIGHT CROWDED DAY

Social Washington Gasps At Loveliness of the Queen

By THOMAS WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 9.—A garden party that might pay off Canada's national debt and not feel it, provided a highlight contrast to Thursday morning's great public reception of the King and Queen.

The Vanderbilts, the Morgans, Mrs. August Belmont, and others whose eminence is measured in seven figures, were in evidence. But for every blue book entry who appeared there were scores who were uninvited.

About 1,500 guests were invited, and the invitation list had been scrutinized with a microscope. Almost all the guests were of such eminence that they were known to the embassy staff and the secret service men.

Lady Lindsay, the wife of the British Ambassador, smiled but little as she piloted the Queen around the grounds, but the Queen made up for it. Her Majesty was dressed in white organza and when she came out o.. the wide portico of the Embassy fronting on the garden there was an involuntary gasp. Social Washington had not known a queen could be so lovely.

Sir Ronald, towering above the King, piloted His Majesty among the men guests. It was noticeable that His Majesty spoke longest to those who seem to have accomplished things in life; rugged Americans in Palm Beach suits or ordinary lounge suits. Later on the portico others were presented to him but down in the crowd the dictum that "clothes make the man" had no effect whatever.

These outstanding Americans liked the King instantly. They were a bit diffident at first; then as the King showed real interest they delved into a real discussion, only cut short by lack of time.

QUEEN WINS HEARTS

The Queen too, was winning all hearts to her as she moved among the ladies. She was so unaffectedly sweet in her full-skirted dress that once again there was a touch of Victoria the Good. Some of the guests wore the same type of dress and now and then there would be a group looking like a spot of an old Victorian print.

Finally their Majesties went back to the portico. In the meantime I had enquired of Lady Marler for Sir Herbert, the Canadian Minister to Washington, only to learn that he was quite ill and unable to attend.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was chatting with Lady Marler and Lady Marler invited me up to the portico where only former ambassadors and speakers of the congress, and a few cabinet ministers had been gathered with their wives.

When Their Majesties returned to the portico they were served with tea, and as is the custom at Ottawa and London, the aides brought ladies, one by one to sit and chat for a few moments with Her Majesty and men to talk with The King. It was noted that His Majesty was deeply interested in his talk with a United States naval officer of high rank, and that his conversations with all those presented were natural and interesting. Like his father, the late King George, His Majesty has a wide knowledge of international affairs. The Americans with whom he talked found that he was keen to listen and to learn. There was no sign of his vocal impediment in any of his conversations.

While Their Majesties were chatting on a portico, a rainbow formed over the far end of the garden, an auspicious augur if one is to take it so. It was followed by a spatter of rain and there was a rush for the portico, but the crowd parted so as not to pass near Their Majesties. All save one hard-faced dowager who stalked squarely past The Queen, who didn't notice her. The lady had probably not been presented.

The garden party started at 4 o'clock but so great was the stream of cars that the guests were held in a mile long queue on the road.

Now and then a diplomatic car would go roaring past with a shrieking motor cycle ahead of it. By and large the Washington garden party was little different to the garden party at Ottawa. The guests were no better dressed and there was the same wide divergence in tastes.

The men at Ottawa nearly all wore formal attire, but some of the men guests Thursday afternoon seemed to be making a show of their sartorial independence, even to the extent of ordinary suits, vestless and with belt and straw hat.

LOOKED AT FACES

Not that it made any difference. Their Majesties looked at faces not at clothes. The women showed a wide catholicity in dress. All those on the portico wore long dresses, with the exception of Mrs. Bankhead, wife of Speaker Bankhead who wore a short one.

A score of women, some young some not so young, seemed to have taken their inspiration of a preview of scenes in "Gone With the Wind" or they were expressing the fact that Virginia is just across the Arlington bridge. They wore wide flounced dresses of an earlier age.

For the most part dresses were long, but the weather ensured they were all of gossamer material or as near to it as possible. There was the widest variety in hats, from tiny doll hats to great flopping Leghorns.

WARM FRIENDLINESS

Their Majesties were happy about the whole thing. In the morning the American people, the man on the street and his wife and family, turned out en masse to show Their Majesties they were very welcome. In the afternoon the nation's leaders gathered for the same purpose. The feeling of the man on the street and the man at the garden party was much the same. They liked Britain's King and Queen, they liked their personality, they liked their warm friendliness, they liked the absence of "swank".

"Some of our people seemed to think the King and Queen went round with their crowns on—at least they thought they would be stiff and formal. When they found they were likeable people like themselves, they simply went wild about them," said one American gentleman at the garden party.

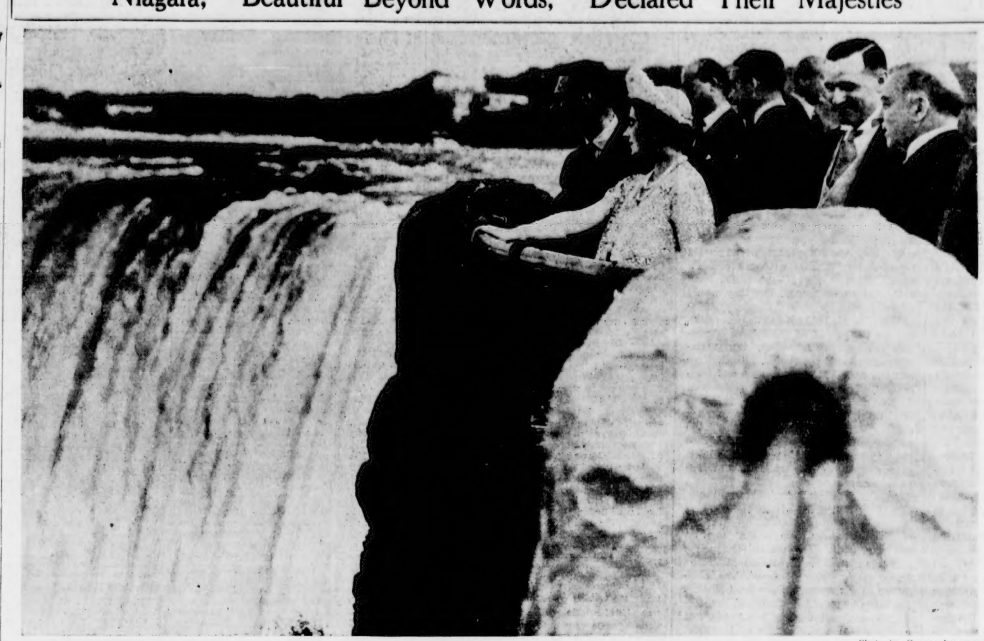

But you'll see that garden party in the news reels. Photographers were not allowed to roam around, but a special platform was built in a bushy part of the garden where they could see all and take all. In a window over the portico another movie camera was placed, so the record ought to be complete.

Crowds lined Massachusetts avenue (popularly known as Diplomatic Row) as the garden party guests rolled slowly past on the way to the British embassy. A man was selling American and British flags, and I counted five Union Jacks sold to two Stars and Stripes in the short period we slowly passed. Washington wanted to show the King and Queen that extra little bit of courtesy that the friendly flag implies.

When Their Majesties rose from their seats on the portico to go the band concealed in the shrubbery struck up softly: "God Save the King," and on this little bit of America that is England, American statesmen and leaders in all walks of life, American church dignitaries and the diplomats of a score of world nations stood silent in tribute.

The Queen waved her hand with its jaunty little upward tilt and the King made his ring in the air with his right hand, and they turned to disappear within the embassy.

Niagara, "Beautiful Beyond Words," Declared Their Majesties

"Five thousand pictures I have seen of this . . ." said the Queen, when she gazed out over majestic Niagara Falls for the first time. This grand picture shows the Royal party at the Falls, last place visited in Canada before it crossed the border for the triumphant entry into United States. Their Majesties, hands resting on the iron railing, view in silence one of their Dominion's greatest natural wonders, of which they have seen many since the tour began last month. Ceremony is forgotten for the moment here as the royal couple listen to the roar of the mighty cataract. Prime Minister Mackenzie King can be seen at the right.

.... Roosevelt's Toast: — King's Response —

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Following are texts of the toast offered by President Roosevelt at the state dinner at the White House last night, and the response of King George VI:

Your Majesties:

In the life of a nation, as in that of an individual, there are occasions that stand out in high relief. Such an occasion is the present one, when the entire United States is welcoming to its soil the King and Queen of Great Britain, of our neighbor Canada, and of all the far-flung British commonwealth of nations. It is an occasion for festivities, but it is also fitting that we give thanks for the bonds of friendship that link our two peoples.

I am persuaded that the greatest single contribution our two countries have been enabled to make to civilization, and to the welfare of peoples throughout the world, is the example we have jointly set by our manner of conducting relations between our two nations.

NO FEAR SHOWN

It is because each nation is lacking in fear of the other that we have unfortified borders between us. It is because neither of us fears aggression on the part of the other that we have entered no race of armaments, the one against the other.

The King and I are aware of a recent episode. Two small uninhabited islands in the centre of the Pacific became of sudden interest to the British Empire and to the United States as stepping stones for commercial airplanes between America and Australasia.

TAKE 50 YEARS

Both nations claimed sovereignty. Both nations had good cases. To have entered into a long drawn out argument could have meant ill-will between us and delay in the use of the islands by either nation. It was suggested that the problem be solved by the joint use of both islands by both nations, and, by a gentleman's agreement, to defer the question of ultimate sovereignty until the year 1989. The passage of 50 years will solve many problems.

METHODS OF PEACE

If this illustration of the use of methods of peace, divorced from aggression, could only be universally followed, relations between all countries would rest upon a sure foundation, and men and women everywhere could once more look upon a happy, a prosperous and a peaceful world.

May this kind of understanding between our countries grow ever closer, and may our friendship prosper. Ladies and gentlemen, we drink to the health of His Majesty, King George VI.

The King's Reply

The visit which the Queen and I are paying you today is something which has been in our minds for many weeks, and if we have had our moments of anxiety they have served to make us realize how intensely we have been looking forward to the present occasion.

I wish therefore in the first place to thank you for your kind invitation and for your still kinder welcome. We have been deeply touched by the manner in which Washington has already received us; and we expect to enjoy every minute of our remaining time in the United States.

From Canada which we have just left and whither we shall soon return, I bring you today the warm greetings of a neighbor and a trusted friend.

From my other dominions, from the United Kingdom, and from all my Empire I carry to you expressions of the utmost cordiality and good will.

As I drink a toast to you, Mr. President, I wish you every possible health and happiness. I trust and believe that in years to come the history of the United States will continue to be marked by that ordered progress and by that prosperity which have been theirs in the past.

And I pray that our great nations may ever in the future walk together along the path of friendship in a world of peace.

BRITISH TAKE WASHINGTON: IN STREAMER LINE

All New York Papers Splash Royal Visit Over Front Pages

By TED FARAH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, June 9.—"British take Washington again," was the headline flared across the front page of the World - Telegram Thursday as King George and Queen Elizabeth were welcomed by cheering thousands in the United States capital.

All metropolitan papers splashed the Royal visit over their front pages, with accompanying pictures of Their Majesties as they arrived on American soil or as they viewed Niagara Falls from the Canadian side.

The World-Telegram in an editorial headed "Welcome," said of the King and Queen:

WON DISTINCTION

"They are greeted by the American people not merely as representatives of another great democracy, or as royalty, but as two great human beings who have won that distinction in their own right.

"The story of their 7,000-mile journey through the Dominion to the north is the proof—a journey characterized by unfailing patience, tact and good sportsmanship. They have shown, as we are wont to say, that they 'can take it'.

"We like them. And we hope they like us."

The New York Post, which carried its Washington story under a double-deck streamer on page one, said in an editorial:

CLOSER FRIENDS

"We are glad King George and Queen Elizabeth will glimpse, however briefly, the nation which grew out of those 13 colonies. And we hope the British are as proud as we are that the two peoples, once bitter enemies, today stand as closer friends—in the real sense of the term—than any other two powers in the world.

"That friendship is not the kind of 'friendship' for example, which marks the Italo-British pact. It is not an alliance, ideological front, or military understanding. It is not a partnership for plunder and power.

"The relations of the peoples of the United States and Great Britain are close because they are rooted in common culture and civilized understanding.

"We hope they have a grand time."

Dominion-Provincial Commission's Report Expected in July

OTTAWA, June 9—The work of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, underway for the last year and a half, is expected to be completed next month when the commission's report is scheduled to be placed in the hands of the government.

Now the four commissioners who were assigned the momentous task of devising an improved pattern for Canada's internal fiscal structure, are concentrating on final stages of their report—the recommendations which are likely to help shape in substantial degree Canada's future as a nation.

In the last year the four commissioners—two professors of economics, a lawyer and a newspaper editor—have reviewed in detail the almost 11,000 pages of evidence heard in 89 days of actual sittings, composed of the evidence of 395 witnesses and 400 exhibits submitted by provincial and municipal governments and organizations representing all phases of opinion.

The commissioners have also reviewed specific studies on various aspects of the national economic life prepared by a score of experts.

With the exception of 10 days spent last November in final public sittings, the commission has been working steadily on its report since the main public sittings were completed a year ago.

While it was found that some angles required further private investigation when the summary was begun, work on the report was generally felt to have been affected by the enforced retirement of Chief Justice N. W. Rowell, of Ontario, from the chairmanship because of illness which struck him at the close of the commission's Toronto sittings in May, 1938. The work has progressed, however, under the subsequent chairmanship of Dr. Joseph Sirois.

Word Thursday from the commission offices was that the work was progressing towards completion some time in July but it was still too early to set a definite date.

Alberta's Twin Air Centres

Forty thousand people packed Kenyon Field when Lieutenant - Governor Bowen officially opened Lethbridge city's new airport on Wednesday. The residents of the southern city do well to celebrate the event, for it is as important to Lethbridge as the opening of the station was to a pioneer town three decades back, which marked the arrival of the railway.

Lethbridge is strategically situated in respect to air lines. It is the cross-roads where the TCA mainline will be intersected by the international route from the United States through Canada to Alaska—perhaps to the Orient. It is now and has been since the opening of the TCA the junction where planes on the Edmonton route connect with those on the transcontinental line. As air transport grows and services multiply and extend, Lethbridge will benefit; and air transport is as certain to grow in this central western area as railway traffic grew in an earlier day.

Edmonton is interested in the position and prospects of Lethbridge as an aviation centre and connecting point, because the circumstances which promise large development there also make development here assured. More than three million tons of freight and express left Edmonton's airport last year, while more than eleven thousand passengers landed or departed. The traffic here will expand as more planes and more traffic pass through the junction point at Lethbridge.

Jasper's Turn Next

The Dominion estimates for the present year contain the sum of $335,000 with which to complete the Lake Louise-Jasper highway. They include also a sum for the work to be done during the summer on the Big Bend section of the Trans-Canada highway, which will be completed next year. The completion of these two projects will wind up the present federal program of road-building in the mountain parks, and of approaches to the parks, so far as major undertakings are concerned.

It is no state secret that the heavy expense involved in building these two highways has been the rock on which were dashed the hopes of large votes of Dominion money for improvements in Jasper, completion of the highway from Edmonton to Jasper, and the construction of a westward extension from Jasper to connect with the British Columbia system and open a trans-mountain route to the Coast. The northern route, and the extensive improvement of Jasper Park itself, just hadn't a chance of getting large sums of federal money while millions were being spent in building the ice-field highway and filling in the gap on the Trans-Canada.

With the completion of these, it will be Jasper's turn for attention, for the carrying out there of improvements, and the building of the eastward and westward park approach highways. Hon. J. A. MacKinnon's statement to the Motor Association is a timely reminder of this impending change in the situation; a change which all those interested in the development of the northern route and of Jasper Park itself should note as a basis for future action.

This is the time to impress upon Ottawa that the work of park development and approach building, which started at the international boundary and has been proceeding northward, will have to be carried right along when the icefield highway and the Big Bend section are finished.

Past and Present

Some one has looked up the record and found that King George and Queen Elizabeth entered the United States on the anniversary of the day Richard Henry Lee introduced in the Continental Congress the resolution which resulted in the breaking away of the United States from Great Britain. A happier day for the welcome "invasion" could not have been chosen. The demonstrations of cordiality at Niagara and at Washington show how completely the antagonisms of 163 years ago have vanished.

Some other interesting discoveries may reward searchers if they continue to dig into the annals of the long past. They will find, for one thing, that an ancestor of Queen Elizabeth, back in the strenuous days of 1715, entertained the Old Chevalier and died fighting the Royalists on battlefield of Sheriffmuir. The Daughters of the Revolution should be interested to find that the Queen comes also of ancestry that was "again the government". Her Majesty chose a better way. She did not head a rebellion. She just married the king-to-be, and now shares his throne.

One fact that is well-known but not always remembered should be brought to light afresh when the events of today are viewed against the historic background. It is this: the men who revolted 163 years ago and created the United States as an independent country were Englishmen. They were English of the English, the hardy, pioneering type. They revolted because they were Englishmen, and would not stand for "taxation without representation". Men of other breed might have submitted to be bossed, but they would not.

Nothing of that kind can happen again, because the peoples of the British Dominions now govern themselves, tax themselves and spend the money, with the free and full approval of the people and Government of Great Britain. For this a good deal of credit belongs to the Englishmen of the thirteen colonies who revolted a century and a half ago. They taught the statesmen and people of Old England that the way to build an Empire was to let it grow and develop the institutions of free government.

Editorial Notes

Having failed to convince a judge on the point, Col. Drew wanted the public accounts committee of parliament to find Major Hahn guilty of fraud. The committee in its investigations learned that the alleged "fraud" has resulted in a $5,000,000 contract coming to Canada and in the creation at Toronto of the most efficient small arms factory in the British Empire. Canada could use some more men of that type in its industrial life.

Crop conditions in this part of the province have been supposed by many Edmonton people to be typical of conditions throughout the province. This evidently was a mistake, for Calgary papers welcomed a mixed rain, sleet and snow storm on Monday as bringing badly needed subsoil moisture to that area, promising to end serious soil-drifting, cheering the ranchers with a prospect of pasture on parched range land, and crediting small lakes in the southeastern drought area where none had existed since the dry cycle began in 1928. This is too big a country to judge general conditions by local circumstances.

Learning About Canada

By the time the Royal Visit has been completed, the world should know a lot more about Canada than it has hitherto. Especially in the United Kingdom should there be a vastly greater knowledge and understanding of this Dominion. For not only is His Majesty informing himself rapidly about Canada, as he showed in Victoria, but the army of press correspondents that accompanies the royal train is informing the peoples of the British Isles and of the United States in mile-long telegraphic and cable dispatches about the country as well as about the royal couple.

It has long been a complaint in Canada that British newspapers have paid little attention to Canadian affairs. No doubt other overseas Dominions have had the same complaint. Certainly overseas news has received little space in the newspapers of the United Kingdom and only slightly more in those of the United States.

But after the royal visit the average citizen of both those countries should have a much clearer picture of Canada, of its size and diversity, of its wealth and of its cities. This, of course, is all to the good and surely the knowledge gained and interest aroused by the Royal Visit will not be allowed to die once the visit is over.

Every day thousands of words of telegraph and cable dispatches have been leaving Canada, describing in detail not only the events connected with the visit, but of the country, its cities and its people. Moving picture film has been exposed by the mile and will be shown all over the world. And radio broadcasts have been carried with an equally wide distribution. These have gone not only to the United Kingdom and the United States, but to all parts of the Empire as well. The result should be a greater Empire solidarity and friendship.—Saskatoon Star-Phoenix.

Countryside Versus Cities

One unspectacular but highly important factor in the "second phase" of the Sino-Japanese war of which little has been made is the continuous battle of the "countryside versus the cities." Attention was drawn to it by Prof. Chang Peng-chun in a London lecture. He had asked a military leader who is very close to the Chinese generalissimo what he thought of this part of the conflict. Not only of its immediate military consequence, but also its long-term effect.

The answer the military leader gave, reduced to a comparatively few words, was that fundamental reason for the confidence the Chinese are manifesting is to be found in the fact that China is backward in most spheres of modern activity. In other words, because the country's whole industrial system is not yet organized on anything approaching a streamlined model, the cities have not developed on such a degree of potential strength as to control the countryside completely. Contrast this condition with that obtaining in modern countries. There, during the last century, the cities have become extremely important that the countryside simply cannot live without them, thus the cities control the countryside; but this is not true of China.

The point thus made in the case of China, therefore, is that the Japanese may go in and get a few cities and still be surrounded by the Chinese countryside. In the last two years, moreover, good harvests have been reaped, and it has not been a difficult matter for the Chinese authorities—a unified nation behind them—to keep the countryside calm and loyal, keyed up as it obviously is by the phenomenon of a new awakening of a national consciousness. So, to quote Prof. Chang Peng-chun and to leave out the significance of China's effective guerrilla warfare, there have been Japanese penetrations, "yes, but no fronts."—Victoria Times.

Russia?

It is perfectly clear that nobody knows what Russia means. The British press comfort themselves with the fact that the door has not been finally locked against further negotiations—though it sounded decidedly like a slam when Commissar Molotoff closed it. The German and Italian press, however, exhibit very little joy over the Russian rejection. They even think that the Anglo-Russian negotiations may yet result in a pact, though one "so watered down" as to be ineffective.

This is as good an "out" as any, though it might be pointed out that the Russians are not watering it down but putting more raw material in it than the British quite like to swallow. The French, of course, are urging that the British grant whatever terms the Russians demand. They are convinced that a Russian alliance is an absolute necessity if the Polish-Rumanian Eastern front is to stand up against any heavy strain. So they would bring Russia in at all costs.

The British hesitation is hardly to be explained by the reported exactions credited to Russia. Having guaranteed Poland, they would not be likely to lose Russian co-operation simply because Moscow wanted the small Baltic nations protected, too. Indeed, it would be almost necessary for the Anglo-French-Russian alliance to defend the Baltic front and so prevent a flank attack on Russia by Germany. Obviously there must be other and more compelling reasons, and some of them are not far to seek.

The basic trouble, probably is that the British Government and the Russian Government profoundly distrust each other. Each apparently thinks that the other is striving to lead it into a trap. The British fear that the Russians—who are still for them the symbol of proletarian revolution—might encourage the Western democracies to go to war with the Axis Powers, and then stand cynically aside while the four great European nations exhausted themselves. After that, the disillusioned and desperate people of those prostrated nations might easily turn to the East for a sign, and act as Italy, Hungary and other countries did after the devastating storm of the Great War—plunge into Bolshevism for relief.

The Russians on their side make no secret of fearing that the British and the French might draw them into a war with Germany and Italy, and then leave them to fight it out largely on the Eastern front. After that, the still strong and unexhausted democracies could pretty well dictate the peace. They could send Hitler into exile as they did the Kaiser, and then could—with the ever active threat of Japan from the East—set up a "capitalistic" government in Moscow.—Montreal Star.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Their Majesties have left the West, there leaving memories of kindly acts and acknowledgments. Wherever they went they took pains to show kindnesses and attentions to people who were not on the list of local notables—a stonemason, an Indian squaw, a bed-ridden wife, a crippled schoolteacher, youngsters and returned men wherever they saw them. Everyone who came near them was impressed by their graciousness. They have linked the provinces of Canada in devotion to their persons, as no politician could. Therein is the secret of success of monarchy, in a democracy, over elected temporary heads.

A HARVEST OF MEMORIES

○ ○ ○

Two events, culled from reports of their triumphal tour, impress themselves on my mind. The first was the visit of the Dionne quintuplets —the uncrowned Majesties of Canada. Through a defect in my mentality, I cannot see much to make a fuss about in a quintuple birth. Aristotle records a case where four successive sets of quintuplets came to one married couple. Until he discovered there was money to be made from a curious public, the early reactions of Pere Dionne, seemed about right in this age when every child is an expense. He was reported to have said in the first shock of quintuple fatherhood, "A man like me ought to be put in prison."

MESDAMES THE QUINTS

What Yvonne said to the King when they had their little joke together, or the kisses which were exchanged, are only of passing interest. The permanent significance of the quints before their Royal guardian, is that they show what can be done with children, even of peasant stock, when they are given care and nurture. These five radiant little girls ought to stand as representatives of all children, and of the rights of children in this wicked and troubled world.

They should make us all more determined to abolish preventible poverty and disease, and resent all infringements upon the child's right to health and happiness. Above all, when mothers in great European nations are being bonussed to bring forth children to serve as cannon-fodder for the ambitions of dictators, it should make us all the more intolerant of war—the supreme crime against childhood.

○ ○ ○

The other episode that seemed to me full of significance was the effect of acquaintance with the Royal pair, upon many who previously were lukewarm or hostile to them. One of them, Edward T. Folliard, special correspondent for the Washington Post frankly admits he has undergone "conversion" to Their Majesties. All through his childhood, says Folliard, he had been taught to look up to and be proud that he was Irish, without a drop of English blood in his inheritance. He was trained to believe that it was his loyal duty to be against British kings.

AN IRISHMAN SURRENDERS

Before the Royal party had reached Vancouver, Folliard had come to realize the folly of such inborn hostilities. He fell under the charm of the friendly young king, so earnestly striving to fulfill his duty, and of his charming democratic Queen. The change which Mr. Folliard underwent in his attitude toward the King and Queen was so vividly reflected in his writings that he said, "The Post staff probably think I've gone silly. But no matter how enthusiastic my reports seem, they are understatements when judged against the reality of what we have seen."

There is nothing like seeing and knowing people to cure one's mind of prejudices. The visit of the King and Queen to United States will rouse friendly feelings in the hearts of millions of Americans.

England and United States have been bound together with like sorrows. Two great submarines—the Squalus of the American Navy and Thetis of the British Navy have foundered off their own shores, with loss of life. Ever since its invention, the submarine has been the most intricate, tricky and dangerous of craft. Every man who boards one has a constant rendezvous with death. Gas asphyxiation from chlorine, generated from the storage batteries or explosion of electric contact of the hydrogen—oxygen mixture are colorless—liberated at the same time, is a constant danger. Hundreds of valves and switches have to be operated from fifteen or more control stations, to raise or lower the craft, supply air, operate pumps, start or stop engines. A miscalculation of a few seconds by a member of the crew may mean death for all.

A RENDEZVOUS WITH DEATH

Cruel engines of destruction, in a world that refuses to disarm, they too often become the tombs of the men who man them.

Religion Day By Day

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

AFTER FORTY YEARS

When I was still in my teens, an ardent Christian Endeavorer, I had more than a little to do with the great Pennsylvania State Christian Endeavor Convention in York, Pennsylvania, in 1894. Only youth could have stood up under those months of strenuous activities. Our slogan, with which we showered the state, was "We are praying and working for the most spiritually powerful convention." The glow of these days returns to me as I write.

Last Sunday I was speaking at a community meeting in interior Pennsylvania, and after the service a man came to me to talk of "York, '94." That convention was the turning point in his life. He knew and loved Christ. Through it, he went through all the years of active Christian work that have intervened, he has known the peace and joy of that experience.

Somehow, that man's words stirred anew in me the consciousness that the revelation and results of every bit of Christian living and working can come to us only when we "know fully."

We plant and water in blind faith, our Father; and we pray for grace to trust to Thee for the harvest. Amen.

Another Royal Occasion

Editor, Bulletin: While viewing the Royal procession here on Friday the sight of cheering crowds and waving flags brought back to my mind very vividly a procession in which I played a small but very amusing and entirely unrehearsed part. The writer along with many more Canadian troops had returned to France to rejoin our soldiers shortly after the Armistice. We had left the line near Valenciennes, so we proceeded back to that area, and then went on to Mons from where the boys had finished up. At this time everything was disorganized; no one seemed to know where the different units were located, only that the 1st Division was already on the march to the Rhine as part of the army of occupation. Fresh from the gay peace celebrations of London, we were still in holiday mood, and now with the war over, we thought that a week or so of extra leave might go unnoticed, so a number of us decided to do a little touring. The weather was fairly good and the main thing, the mangling of food, wasn't at all bad. Some of us had been able to find the paymaster in the right mood before leaving London and had been supplied with a few extra pounds of leave money.

After visiting Brussels, the historic field of Waterloo and Namur, about fifteen of us decided to go up to Liege so we squeezed ourselves into a train going in that direction. When we arrived at that city we saw a great display of flags, and the wife of our party said: "They must have known that we were coming." Unknown to us we had chosen the day that the King and Queen of the Belgians, were visiting Liege. The Royal procession was due in an hour's time we were told and we were the first allied troops that the people of Liege had seen, except for some British Tommies who had found their way there after being released from German prison camps. There were a few of those ragged soldiers in the station, who when they saw us, hailed us like long lost brothers, and when they learned that we had just returned from England they were anxious for all the latest news. To escape souvenir hunters, and the excesses of patriotic bearded warriors, our new found friends offered to take us to the billets where they and others were being cared for. When we emerged from the station cavalry and police were keeping the Royal route open, people were lined up on both sides twelve to twenty deep. One of our party suggested that we might be able to steal part of the show, and strange as it may seem, and much to our surprise, we were allowed to go on. The crowds lining the route, on realizing who we were, started cheering, and shouts of "Vive le Anglais, Vive le Canada," were ringing out on both sides of us. Entering into the spirit of the occasion we started waving back to the crowds, a few even going so far as to bow their acknowledgment of the applause. In this way we walked a few blocks, and then decided that we had done our share in the Royal show and escaped to the side lines and waited for the real procession to come along. I wonder if by chance any other of that little band who took part in this parade should see this article, I would be very pleased to hear from them.

Kind Lady: "My poor man, how did you ever come to such a condition?"

Weary Bill: "Ma'm, I'm a victim of over-education. When I was a kid I read so much about the blessin's of poverty that I jes' natchally couldn't work."

Friend (noticing the confused heaps of goods of every description scattered about the room): "Hello! What's happened? Been taking an inventory, had a fire, or are you going to move out?"

Shopkeeper: "That shows how little you know about business. We have merely been waiting on a lady who dropped in for a packet of pins."

A comedian in a fifth-rate touring company had not been a success. One evening he approached the manager.

"I say, I'm afraid I shan't be able to appear tonight," he said, "I don't know what's the matter, but I feel so funny."

"Then for goodness sake go on now!" said the manager, "It will be the first time you've been funny since you joined this company!"

FALSE CREEK FLATS TO BE PARK CENTRE

VANCOUVER, June 9.—Hon. Ian Mackenzie, minister of national defence, announced Thursday plans for development of a 26-acre park and recreational centre on False Creek flats in downtown Vancouver as an unemployment works scheme.

Cost of the project, about $150,000, would be shared on a three-way basis, the city to provide materials and supervision and the Dominion and provincial governments to share the labor cost equally.

Mr. Mackenzie said arrangements have been made with the federal department of labor and co-operation of the provincial government and the city council is being sought.

Beef may be cooked 20 minutes for each pound, mutton 20 minutes, and pork 30 minutes. Baste as necessary in its own juice. When about half done, turn the skin side uppermost for browning. If desired, carrots may be placed around the roast about 30 minutes before removing from the oven, and these whole roasted carrots may then be served as a garnish for the roast.

Dr. Frank McCoy's great book, "The Fast Way to Health," gives you the mechanics of health in plain, easily understandable language.

CHURCH PROPERTY RULED TAX EXEMPT AT LLOYDMINSTER

At the Court of Revision held at Lloydminster on Monday evening, the council decided to exempt all church property from taxation. This practice had been in force during previous years, but a new assessment was struck this spring and the residences of the ministers assessed. This brought an appeal from all of the churches except the Grace United Church. The appeal was upheld after representatives from all churches appealing had addressed the council on the added burden it would be for the members to carry.

Starting Sunday, a three-day rain brought salvation to crops in this district. The condition was getting serious before the rain.

At the recent Elks convention held in Calgary, Brother C. Conway of the Lloydminster lodge was appointed the provincial chaplain. The Lloydminster lodge was awarded the silver cup for the best community work among the Alberta lodges during the past year.

"That the Province of British Columbia offer, and that the federal government should accept the transfer of Mount Robson Park, conditional upon the construction of the highway forthwith by the federal government."

It was further resolved, by committee in meeting, after the above resolution was made:

"That the McBride District Board of Trade request the construction of the highway from Alberta to Blue River immediately, thus completing the last link in the all weather trans-Canada highway."

IMPOSITION OF FISHING FEES IS PROTESTED

Much indignation is being expressed by residents of Jasper Park and those connected with the fishing facilities over the imposition this week of a fee for fishing in the park. Resident fishermen are charged $2.00 for the privilege and non-residents, $5.00 per season, or one dollar per day per person.

Since all advertising sent out specifically states that fishing is absolutely free in the park, it is the general impression that this new ruling of the parks bureau at Ottawa should be held in abeyance for this season at least. Protests have been forwarded to Ottawa from private citizens, Jasper Chamber of Commerce, the traffic department of the Canadian National Railways and the Alberta Fish and Game League.

The herd bull, Lindell Pride Signalman, heads the herd and Cecil Copeland is in charge of the stock. They leave about June 28 for Brandon and show there on July 3. Later they travel to fairs at Calgary, Edmonton and Saskatoon and come to the Red Deer Fair on August 3, 4 and 5.

LACOMBE

Over 300 sheep raisers from all over Alberta attended the field day held here Wednesday at the Dominion Experimental station, sponsored by the Central Alberta Wool Growers' association. One of the features of the day was a demonstration in sheep herding given by dogs owned by W. M. Martin, of Maple Creek, Sask., the dogs moving the sheep from pen to pen without the least noise or disorder.

A lamb trimming demonstration was given by the Misses Flora and Pauline Westphal of Carstairs, while sheep shearing was demonstrated by W. G. Gauld of Lacombe.

In a review of the sheep industry when addressing the assembled sheep raisers, A. A. MacMillan, assistant chief, sheep division, Ottawa, said that although Alberta is ranking third in sheep raising at present, it will only be a short time until this province will take the lead in the industry. W. H. J. Tisdale, assistant manager of the Canadian Co-Operative Wool Growers' association, Toronto, and many other noted authorities on sheep raising also gave lectures and demonstrations.

RED DEER

USES BOTH HANDS TO WRITE

Letter From a Man of 90

He asks us to excuse his writing. We do more than that — we congratulate him on being able to write at all at his age, especially as he has been suffering from rheumatism. This is what he says in his letter:—

"Three years ago I was in bed for six weeks with inflammatory rheumatism. Since that time I have been taking Kruschen Salts and have not had another attack. But the complaint left me with inflamed feet and it hurt me to walk. My hands were also somewhat stiff. I took Kruschen every morning before breakfast, and shall continue to do so, because I am sure they have kept me in good shape for three years. Excuse this writing, as I am ninety years old and use both hands to write." — J.R.G.

The pain and stiffness of rheumatism are often caused by uric acid in the muscles and joints. Kruschen helps to dissolve and remove excess uric acid in a gentle way through the natural channels. Renewed health and vigour is the result.

PEACE EFFORTS BEARING FRUIT, SAYS SIR JOHN

YARMOUTH, England, June 9—Optimism over the chances of European peace was expressed Thursday by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, addressing the Yarmouth National Conservative and Liberal Associations.

"As the weeks go on and as the months go by I feel increasing confidence that our efforts for peace will succeed," Sir John declared.

He declared the King and Queen's "wonderful journey" was adding "every single day" to the sympathy and understanding between Britain and English-speaking peoples everywhere.

"We ought to acknowledge our gratitude to the King and Queen for what they are doing at such labor and with such zeal and goodwill," he added.

Innisfail Named Nominating Point For Conservatives

RED DEER, June 9.—No candidate was announced by Conservatives of the Red Deer federal riding at their convention held in the parish hall here on Thursday. The gathering had been announced as a nominating convention and it had been the intention to select a candidate to contest the seat at the next general dominion election, but the attendance was not large enough and not representative enough in the opinion of those present. Innisfail was named as the place for holding the nominating convention and the date will be announced later. Sir Arthur Stonhouse, Pine Lake, vice-president of the Red Deer federal association, presided in the absence of the president, Dr. J. B. Snyder, Trochu.

Despite the fact that only-twenty members were present, the regular June meeting of the Waskatenau Board of Trade, held in the Community hall recently, was a lively affair.

Proposing a new agreement with the town of Lacombe which would include a slight decrease in domestic lighting rates and special low water rates during the summer, H. B. Sherman and D. A. BRIDE ON A BUDGET

By JANET DORAN

CAST OF CHARACTERS

IRIS IVES, a radiant bride who thought love came first and money could take care of itself.

BART WHITTAKER, a righteous bridegroom who looked at the bank-book first and his wife afterward.

Yesterday: Iris buys a suit and fur, on the instalment plan, convinces Bart that two could pool their resources and afford to marry. So Bart begins to figure the cost of the affair.

They were married at 4 o'clock on a Saturday afternoon in the gray stone church.

CHAPTER II

HIS attractive, weather-browned face was so serious, his brown eyes so intent as he figured on the back of the old envelope. Watching him, Iris felt a curious maternal pity tugging at her heart. He took all this so seriously, he was so sure that arithmetic was the solution to happiness. While almost any girl could tell you it had nothing to do with real happiness.

"What you'll save on your clothes alone will be a big star, honey," alone will be a big start, honey," of his arithmetic soberly. Iris said nothing. She didn't tell him that it was no saving, because she had purchased the suit for no other reason than this. And—it wasn't paid for yet!

"There's the rent and upkeep for one apartment, Bart," Iris volunteered faintly. He looked up at her and grinned. "Whatever rent we'd pay, will be a saving."

"And eating at home, to say nothing of good home cooking," Bart added fervently. "Come to think of it, we've been silps to be afraid of this for so long, honey. Why, the way I figure it, we'll be money ahead, being married. We'll have high-priced restaurant meals, no indigestion, only one place to keep up, and being together as well."

"You'll take me out to dinner now and then, Bart Whittaker, or I'll step out with the professor of natural history!"

He grasped her slender wrists in warm strong fingers and pulled her down close.

"Dear," he said humbly, "I want you to be happy, I don't want you ever to have to worry and scrimp and do without the way other brides do. It's because I love you so, Iris, that I've been afraid. Afraid it would be selfishness to ask you to marry me, knowing the hard road we'd have ahead."

"If you love me," Iris whispered softly. With a smothered endearment he crushed her to him.

"Dear, dearest dear," he whispered unsteadily. "You know that You know I love you, I'm half crazy with loving you. . . . Iris, why wait any longer? Why not be married now—we can have a honeymoon after school closes, and we have our vacations. Now . . . we've waited too long as it is, dear."

"Of course," Iris agreed practically. Hadn't she known the suit would do this? After buying such a thing else and failing, an $80 powder blue wool gabardine suit brought about the mirade. And a comfortable lounge chair, a smoking stand, and a good supper. It just proved how sound those old-fashioned notions were!

"And you won't mind waiting till summer for our honeymoon, dear?" Bart urged tenderly. He stroked the rough wool of his coat, Iris shook her head.

Mind? She'd a hundred times rather wait until summer for a honeymoon. By then, she'd have to have new summer clothes; by then she'll have persuaded out of his queer obsession against clothes money expenditure. It was just a matter of time.

• • •

They were ten minutes late to the movie, and had to stay over because, as Iris said, she didn't care about newsreels, or comedies, but she did love Myrna Loy.

She had the best clothes sense of any star in Hollywood, Bart," Iris explained, "nobody else can touch her."

"Good sound sense, too—" Bart agreed, still in the roseate glow of a man newly engaged, newly pledged to marry within five days, if his law approved their license application. "Wears plain duds. Suits—like that one you've got on, honey. Plain little things that don't cost much."

Iris was glad of the friendly darkness of the theatre as they sat down. Not that Bart would guess how much her suit cost, or any of her clothes for that matter, from her face. Only—well, she was glad it was dark in the theatre. Some catty woman might smile sarcastically, and warn Bart; someone might titter, after looking at the obviously expensively tailored suit.

In the days that followed, Iris was beset with a hundred issues. She had to buy new lingerie, new pajamas and a chenille robe, and mules. She had to have another blouse, and some pumps and a hat. And she had to insist gently but firmly on gardenias, instead of the violets Bart wanted to give her to wear to the wedding.

"Violets make your eya so beautiful," he pleaded with a rare burst of eloquence for him, "and they're in season now, honey."

"But all my life I've wanted gardenias for my wedding, Bart! . . . I know it's silly, and they're probably horribly expensive, but a girl doesn't have but one wedding in a lifetime, and it's just this once. You . . . you can get me the violets to wear on my suit later—after the wedding if you want. I'll wear them to dinner, and you'll love them just as much."

He gulped and tried not to show the dent this made in his careful budget. Gardenias were bad enough but gardenias and violets too!

"You must remember a small gift for your best man, too, Bart," she reminded him. "Some nice studs, or a cigarette box, or something."

"I never thought of that, Iris," Bart said dismally—as if it were quite her fault, instead of being a custom she merely reminded him of.

"I'll get them, Bart; you quit worrying." Iris admonished him.

"No! I'll get them."

"Darling," she said in tender reproach, "not letting it get you down this early? Think what I've to worry over."

"This just that I was so sure I'd figured everything," he explained.

• • •

They were married at 4 o'clock on a Saturday afternoon, before a few friends and the dean, while the dean's wife wept sentimentally all through the solemn little ceremony in the gray stone church at the end of Sorority Row. And instead of returning home to the little apartment they had prepared, out of Iris's rooms, and an additional room, adjoining, plus the furnishings Bart brought from his rooms, there was the wedding supper at the Tivoli.

Bart was tired from a rushed hectic day at the shop, and if he thought, fleetingly, of the cozy Saturday night suppers of steak, French fried potatoes, salad and shortcake, or baked beans and fixings that was their usual Saturday night feast, he said nothing. This was his wedding day, and Iris's. And whatever Iris wanted, he wanted her to have.

At the supper, Johnny Kelvin, his best man, and a reporter on a small daily paper 40 miles from Linwood, had a cocktail too many and grew maudlin over Iris.

"Best pal I ever had, Iris, darlin'," he admonished her owlishly, "but a devil with the women."

Iris was startled. Of all faults she knew men to possess, this was one she hadn't found in Bart. He seemed peculiarly immune to lovely damsels, and turned disinterested eyes to their best efforts to snag his interest.

"Another thing," Johnny continued solemnly, "never write a penny in Bart's right. Makes him ill. Can't bear to see money wasted. Noble virtue and all that, but blight on romance."

Bart wasn't listening to any of this. As she studied her new husband, the length of the table away, talking seriously with Dean Somers on the business outlook at the moment, Iris realized that Johnny had spoken a fear that was buried deep in her subconscious mind. That was why she never let him know how much she paid for anything, or how much she spent. That was why she never let Bart know how much money! It was the secret reason for a dozen little reticences that had sprung up between them over the months they had known each other. Secrets she was determined he should never know.

"Don't look so scared, bride," Johnny continued cheerfully, "though you're as lovely as Red Riding Hood, I'm no wolf. I was just charting your course for a happy sail over the seas of matrimony. It's the first year that counts, Iris. On it, you lay the foundation of your future, be it happiness or—misery."

"Johnny, don't" she said sharply, and when Bart looked up, startled, and gave her a questioning look she managed a set little smile and passed it off gracefully.

"He was teasing me about something that is—sacred," she said to Bart, not realizing that she laid the first paving stone with that small lie.

That out of that small lie were to grow a thousand more, a mighty network of them, choking off their happiness, destroying their faith, their trust and love. That by its very glibness, that first small lie betrayed her complete unwillingness ever to let Bart know—how completely apart were their lines of thought.

Harry Wilmont Charged With Manslaughter

CALGARY, June 9—Harry Wilmont, of Calgary, was charged with manslaughter in police court Thursday following the death of Charles W. Stout, 67, of Calgary, who was injured fatally by an automobile allegedly driven by Wilmont, May 30.

Stout was riding his bicycle when an automobile struck him.

Wilmont, who also faced a charge of causing bodily harm by wilful misconduct, was remanded until June 16.

ALBERTA SUGAR BEET INDUSTRY HAS EXPANDED

Cane Sugar Refineries Had Aided Farmers, Inquiry Told

OTTAWA, June 9.—Far from the cane sugar refiners preventing expansion of the sugar beet industry, considerable increase has resulted in Alberta in consequence of encouragement given there by the British Columbia Sugar Refining Company, E. T. Rogers, president of that company, told the tariff board Thursday at the opening day's session of a general inquiry into the sugar industry.

Mr. Rogers was presenting a brief on the operation of the tariff on his company's activities. He replied to a remark made earlier by Paul Martin (Lib., Essex East), who declared that the sugar industry in Canada was controlled by the cane refiners, a circumstance that operated to the disadvantage of the beet growers.

BIG INCEASE

Mr. Rogers said that since his company took over from the Utah-Idaho Company some years ago it had handled four times more sugar beets than the previous company.

On the general matter of the inquiry Mr. Rogers contended that the spread in tariff between raw and refined sugar was not out of line compared with the spread in the United Kingdom. So far as the United States was concerned, the spread was not a factor since importations were governed by quotas.

DESERVED CONSIDERATION

The beet sugar industry deserved utmost consideration, said Mr. Rogers, in view of the advantage it conferred on the farming communities.

It served as a source of domestic supply, which might be valuable in time of war.

The proposal to eliminate fixed valuation of $2.90 a 100 pounds on imported granulated sugar should not be acceded to. The result of any such action, said Mr. Rogers, would be to intensify competition between Cuban granulated sugar and beet sugar in Eastern Canada. Mr. Rogers urged that the situation be left as it was.

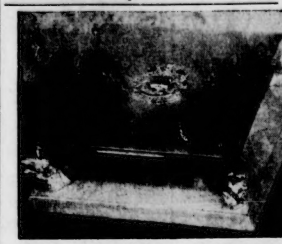

PASTOR TO PAY RENT TO KING IN PEPPERCORNS

FREEHOLD, N.J., June 9.—Although the King and Queen are not expected to stop here Saturday on their way to Fort Hancock, Rev. John Schwacke, rector of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal (Anglican) Church, will have three peppercorns ready to pay rent for the site rent to his "landlords" if an opportunity arises.

The rent is payable under a charter granted by King George II in 1736. Mr. Schwacke paid the rent in full for two centuries on June 4, 1936, when he sent 200 peppercorns to King Edward VIII.

A peppercorn is the seed of the black pepper plant and is very small.

Holds Royal Souvenirs

Ordered by the Royal Mint, Ottawa, this sterling silver casket was made to hold two silver dollars and two medals to commemorate the visit of Their Majesties. The Coat of Arms of Canada in enamel is applied to the cover and the casket is set on Canadian bird's eye maple. Its approximate size is 8 inches square, and was designed and made by Mappins Limited, Montreal.

Silicosis Prevention Method Brings Award to Two Ontario Doctors

TORONTO, June 9—Dr. D. A. Irwin, associate professor in the department of Banting Medical Research, University of Toronto, and Dr. W. D. Robson, chief surgeon of McIntyre-Porcupine, Limited, have been awarded the McCharles bronze medal and $500 by the university governors for investigation on the prevention of silicosis, miners' disease, it was announced Thursday.

Their research has demonstrated the disease may be prevented by use of aluminum dust in mines, factories and similar places where workers are exposed to silica dust and other mineral particles. The aluminum dust is protection for the lungs.

The dust-laden air of dry mines is sprayed with aluminum powder. When inhaled it prevents absorption of quartz particles in the lung tissue.

Dr. Robson, born in New Westminster, B.C., studied at McGill and Toronto universities. Dr. Irwin was born in London, Ont.

Children's Athletic Demonstration Praised By Their Majesties

HAMILTON, June 9.—Hamilton's reception to the King and Queen, and the children's athletic demonstration in particular, was the finest he had seen throughout the Dominion, Prime Minister Mackenzie King assured those responsible for the welcome.

"I've attended every reception in Canada, and this one, from the viewpoint of crowds, enthusiasm, and expression has no equal," said Mr. King here Wednesday. "Nothing like it has been attempted in any cities anywhere."

Nor was the prime minister the only member of entourage impressed. Lady Katherine Seymour requested she be presented to Mayor William Morrison. When this was done, she told him she wanted to meet the mayor of a city that could put on a "wonderful show."

KEEN INTEREST

Their Majesties showed keen interest in the children's display and the King said to Mayor Morrison: "This is wonderful." Turning to the Queen, he remarked "Splendid."

In a telegram to Mayor Morrison after the departure, the King sent special congratulations to those who organized the demonstration. It read:

"It has been a great pleasure to the Queen and myself to visit Hamilton today. I should be grateful if you would express to your fellow citizens our cordial thanks for their loyal and affectionate welcome they gave us. Please give our heartiest congratulations to organizers of the physical training demonstration which we much enjoyed."

Canadian Field Crop Conditions Below Average at End May

OTTAWA, June 9.—Canadian field crops conditions were moderately below average at the end of May as compared with conditions on the same day a year ago, but showed slight improvement over the same period of 1937, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said Thursday in its report from its corps of crop correspondents.

Fall wheat prospects were slightly better than a year ago, but spring wheat conditions in the prairie provinces appeared somewhat less promising compared with last year when the field crops made a favorable start. Coarse grains also failed to make quite as promising an early showing this year due largely to more irregular precipitation during April and May.

PASTURE RETARDED

With the exception of British Columbia, pastures and forage crops across Canada did not make as good progress as on the same date last year. The cool, dry weather during May in the maritime provinces and Quebec retarded pasture growth as in southern Ontario where a dry spring season kept pastures and forage crops in check.

Condition of the principal field crops May 31, 1939, expressed in percentages of the long-time average yields per acre, was as follows, with the condition figures at the same date last year in brackets: Fall wheat 98 (96); spring wheat 94 (90); all wheat 94 (90); oats 93 (97); barley 93 (96); fall rye 85 (96); spring rye 95 (99); all rye 87 (98); peas 93 (97); mixed grains 93 (99); hay and clover 94 (100); alfalfa 95 (98); pastures 92 (100).

PRAIRIE PROVINCES

In the prairie provinces, the condition of the principal grain crops at May 31 was as follows, with last year's condition at the same date in brackets:

Manitoba—Wheat 94 (100); oats 91 (97); barley 91 (97); rye 88 (97).

Saskatchewan—Wheat 92 (99); oats 91 (96); barley 92 (96); rye 85 (98).

Alberta—Wheat 96 (99); oats 97 (96); barley 97 (96); rye 89 (100).

The condition figures reported are based on returns filed at the end of May. Over the month end, heavy precipitation occurred in Manitoba and in less degree across Saskatchewan and Alberta. June 5 and 6 additional beneficial rains fell in Saskatchewan and Alberta areas where most needed, with the result that crop prospects in the prairie provinces have improved beyond their reported condition at May 31.

Arrested for speeding, a Toledo man said he was hurrying to get to a safety meeting. He learned the lesson, anyhow.

GIFTS for the JUNE BRIDE

For Their Wedding and Their Honeymoon

It's June, the merry month of weddings, and there isn't a doubt in the world that you have at least one wedding in the offing and that of course means much brain cudgelling as to what's to be done about the gift problem.

Whether you are in search of a very important gift—perhaps for one of the family or the fondest of friends, you'll find the gift you want listed on this page.

Lovely dresses and delicate wearing apparel; the newest in pianos; jewelry that will touch the heart of any bride; air-conditioned ice refrigerators to adorn the modern kitchen; beautiful portraits and cleaning services second to none.

You'll find your wedding gift hunt a gay adventure.

Going To Be Married?

A NEW RING sparkles on your left hand and at every admiring glance you are asked, "Have you set the date?" And have you? For, of course, you are planning a real wedding. You owe it to yourself. Fie on Gretna Greens, runaway matches, and quiet little trips to the parson. At your wedding you are the most important person in your world. Even the groom is but an accent to set off your radiance. Make your marriage day one you will remember as the time you looked your loveliest—when everything went just right.

MANY TYPES

This does not necessarily mean a flower-decked church, vested choir and dozens of bridesmaids preceding you up the aisle. A real wedding can be as simple as you like. The ceremony may be performed in the family living room, under the trees in the garden, or in your tiny city apartment. It's the spirit you must grasp, and this you can only do when you feel beautiful when your wedding gown becomes you and your bridesmaids are as lovely as the blossoms in your bouquet.

It all comes down to the eternal feminine question, "What shall I wear?" Of course, the time of the year is all important and at this time of year, the mode calls for light, filmy gowns, organdies, nets and chiffons. The lighter silks are first choice since they have such an airy look and are so universally becoming.

WEDDING DRESS SIMPLE

The prettiest weddings are often those where the girls themselves have made their frocks—but that is a question of taste and ability. The lines of the wedding dress are always best when they are very simple, for with veil and flowers, the dress itself cannot be fussy. Last summer a lovely bride wore a frock of embossed organdy made on dirndl lines, and she was surrounded by her maids wearing the same material in a rainbow of pastel colors. These gowns were topped by wide-brimmed leghorn hats with streamers of the same color as their frocks. Her veil of snowy white to mately her frock and her spring blossoms enhanced her beauty charmingly.

Gifts

If you accept an invitation to a wedding reception, you are obliged to send a gift, which is sent to the bride's house—even if you know only the groom and the present is designed for the use of both—two weeks in advance of the wedding. An engraved visiting card should be enclosed.

The bride presents a token-gift of some sort to each of her attendants.

The groom gives the best man and each of the ushers some gift remembrance.

It is quite true, too, that though the bride is not gowned in white, that if she wears a lovely, flattering frock or smart going-away suit and has an attendant in an equally attractive costume, she may have a "wedding" that she will look back upon with happy memories—because she fashioned herself—as best she could—in a manner suited in the most important hour of her life.

Anniversary Of F.Y.P. Week Is Marked

ACHIEVEMENTS and progress made through 21 years of Farm Young People's weeks at the University of Alberta was celebrated on Thursday evening when the 1939 group of Farm Young People and a number of guests were entertained at dinner in Athabaska hall.

The banquet, followed by dancing, marked the conclusion to a week's study and play by more than 150 farm young folk, a week which is arranged annually at the University by the Department of Extension.

In celebration of the twenty-first anniversary, a large birthday cake, decorated in pink and white, with 21 candles, centered the head table and the honor of cutting the cake was given to Mrs. Irene Parlby, one of the far-sighted women of Alberta, who 21 years ago approached University authorities and made farm young people's weeks possible.

Royal Garden Party Is Brilliant Event Of Washington Stay

WASHINGTON, June 9.—King George and Queen Elizabeth passed an hour among an assemblage of notable guests on Thursday afternoon at the British Embassy garden fete held in their honor. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, waving a gold fan the while, talked with the King for five minutes, J. P. Morgan and other leaders of United States government and social life exchanged pleasantries with Their Majesties.

MORE THAN 1,000 GUESTS

The crowd of more than 1,000 guests stood back and formed wide lanes for the King and Queen to pass when they entered the grounds. The king was attired in formal afternoon dress, with pearl gray topper.

Her Majesty presented a striking appearance in a white tucked knit gown with lace inserts, a large white picture hat with a small knot of flowers, and a white lace and ruffled parasol. She wore a diamond bracelet, pearl earrings and a three-strand pearl necklace.

After their stroll in the garden, the Queen sat down for tea with Mrs. John Garner, wife of the vice-president, while the King took his tea with Mr. Morgan sitting near him.

STRAWBERRIES AND CREAM

While the Royal pair were sightseeing with President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the first guests began arriving at the big red brick embassy for strawberries and cream and a chance to glimpse Their Majesties.

Most of the early arrivals among the men chose formal attire, black morning coats with striped trousers and top hats. Many of the toppers were gray. Brilliant dress uniforms were prominent. Women guests were about evenly divided between long sweeping frocks and short street length dresses.

The naval band from the British cruiser Exeter of the West Indies fleet played lively tunes. Band members wore blue uniforms with red colors, white belts and white helmets.

From time to time, Lady Lindsay, wife of the British ambassador, accompanying the Queen, would present a guest to be presented to her majesty. Sir Ronald Lindsay acted in the same capacity with the King. In all, King George met some 150 people.

TO CURTSY OR NOT TO CURTSY

The royal stroll also answered another puzzling Washington question: To curtsy before the Queen or not? Mostly it was answered in the affirmative. Most of those presented dropped a curtsy to Her Majesty and there were, in addition, numerous bobbing curtsys among the guests as the Queen passed by.

After their sightseeing drive, the King and Queen retired briefly to their rooms in the White House and then set out for the garden party. They were 15 minutes late arriving, but the delay was regarded by one of the most uproarious receptions of the day.

They paused in one of the lower roads in the south grounds beside a sparkling fountain where 5,000 Boy Scouts and 3,000 Girl Scouts were cheering while gifts were presented to Their Majesties.

Mrs. Harold Gainer and her sister-in-law Miss Lois Gainer shared hostess duties at breakfast in the Hendsdale home one morning recently, entertaining in compliment to Miss Margaret Allan, whose marriage will take place in mid-June. Guests present included Mrs. V. Myers, Mrs. Fred McDonald, Mrs. W. Duplessis, Miss Elizabeth Lawrence, Miss Phelma Edwards and Miss Grace Ritchie.

On the afternoon of Tuesday, June 20 Chalmers United church ladies aid will entertain members and their friends at a tea party, plans for which were made at a recent meeting. Mrs. W. Buxton presided at the meeting, and tea hostesses were Mrs. G. Fenby and Mrs. J. Mandem.

Empress, an Indian elephant, served on both sides during the Civil War. Both the South and the North paid her for hauling supplies at Nashville, Tenn.

Hat To Suit A Duchess' Fancy

During her sojourn through this western world Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth is setting the style for lovely clothes, styles that will be in demand when she has returned to her home across the seas. The Duchess of Gloucester pictured here is assuming a similar role in England, and one of the newest and loveliest of her hats is this one. She wore it when, with her husband, she attended the Agricultural Show at Oxford. The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester represented the King and Queen at this, an annual affair.

King And Queen Enjoy Program Arranged At Capital State Dinner

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Queen Elizabeth, wearing a diamond and ruby coronet, sat forward in her chair to watch Soco Gap square dancers from North Carolina do the "water wheel." The King-Emperor, resplendent in evening attire, sat by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to hear the Coon Creek girls from Kentucky "knock 'em dead" with fiddle and song.

The unusual scene was the climax of a state dinner and musicale at the White House last night in honor of Their Majesties—a program in which American folk singers and dancers appeared with such eminent vocalists as Lawrence Tibbett and Marian Anderson, the Negro contralto.

STATE DINNER

But before the program, take a peek in the oak-panelled state dining room. First, there had to be an extra cushion for Queen Elizabeth's chair, which of course was at the right of President Roosevelt's. Speaker William Bankhead of the House of Representatives was at her right, then Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the first Lady of Eldo, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Harry Woodring, secretary of war, and so on.

Across the big horseshoe table, decorated with hundreds of fragile orchids, in and around the Munroe gold and mirror centrepiece, sat Mrs. Roosevelt in lovely Alencon lace. The King was at her right.

Next to him was Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the chief justice, and Vice-President John Garner was at Mrs. Roosevelt's left, then Lady Lindsay, , Cordell Hull, secretary of state, and Lady Katharine Seymour, lady-in-waiting to the Queen. At the left of the president were Mrs. Garner, Sir Ronald Lindsay, Mrs. Backhead.

OBJECT OF MANY EYES

The Queen was the object of many eyes. Her coronet contained the biggest single diamond seen here recently—maybe ever. Her white tulle bouffant gown had three full flounces specked with gold. Her necklace and earrings were of diamonds and pigeon-blood rubies, and she wore a diamond necklace.

Thanks to the King, who sent the word around after a taste of Washington heat, men in the royal party were in evening dress instead of court uniforms.

TOASTS

After the terrapin and capon, there were toasts by the President and Her Majesty pledging the friendship of the English-speaking nations. Then the ladies moved to the Green Room, where the Queen sat on a couch and the guests took turns talking to her. In the dining room, President Roosevelt signalled the King and Vice-President John Garner to come to his side of the table, and the men were served liqueurs and coffee.

The Queen talked mostly about the weather, thought it was quite hot. Her children, she said, are just beginning to get homesick for their parents. She and their father talk to them every day.

Then into the East Room for the musicale, to which 200 more guests came. Dinner guests sat in front in straight-backed gilt chairs, some of which had special pads in them to keep bare backs from being creased.

Miss Malloy Heads Dental Nurses

Officers to serve during the coming year named at a recent meeting of the Edmonton Dental Nurses and Assistants' Association held at the home of the retiring president, Miss Peggy Killingstad, are headed by Miss Glen Malloy, president.

Others on the executive include Mrs. S. Pollard, vice-president; Miss G. O'Neill, secretary; Mrs. Mann, treasurer, and Mrs. R. Hammond, social convener.

During the evening Miss Kay Norrington, a bride-to-be of June, was made the recipient of a handsome gift by Miss Killingstad on behalf of the association. A presentation was made also to Miss Killingstad, on her retirement as president.

Present At Shower

Present at the meeting were the following: Miss Ellen Irvine, Miss Gertrude O'Neill, Miss P. Kylling-stad, Mrs. A. Porter Dodds, Miss F. Tracy, Miss Charlotte Steele, Mrs. S. Pollard, Mrs. R. Hammond, Mrs. Mann, Mrs. G. Downes, Miss Kay Norrington, Miss G. Young, Mrs. Cherry and Miss M. Schultz.

* * *

Solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, the marriage service was read by Dr. F. D. Roxburgh. Miss M. Copeland played the wedding marches and during the signing of the register, Miss Jeanette Paul sang "O Promise Me."

Both the bride and bridegroom were unattended.

Reception to relatives and close friends followed the ceremony. Laid with a madeira cloth, the tea table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake. Colorful snapdragons and white candles were also used in decoration. Assisting in serving the guests were Miss Jean Walker, Miss Patricia Walker, Mrs S. Christopher and Mrs. W. H. Betty.

Mr. and Mrs. Barbour have left for a month's honeymoon trip in New York City and Vice-President Garner to come to his side of the table, and the men were served liqueurs and coffee.

The Queen talked mostly about the weather, thought it was quite hot. Her children, she said, are just beginning to get homesick for their parents. She and their father talk to them every day.

Then into the East Room for the musicale, to which 200 more guests came. Dinner guests sat in front in straight-backed gilt chairs, some of which had special pads in them to keep bare backs from being creased.

Bride Chooses Gown Of Pale Pink Net

PALEST pink net, made on youthful lines with tiny bolero jacket fashioned the lovely wedding frock chosen by Miss Margaret Shandruck for her marriage to Mr. Roy Barbour, which was solemnized at the early evening hour of half-past seven o'clock on Thursday.

Sleeves of the bridal frock were short and she wore silver slippers and a chapel veil gathered in a cluster of lilies-of-the-valley in her hair. Her bouquet was of pink roses and valley lilies. Mr. S. Christopher gave the bride in marriage.

The bride is the only daughter of Mrs. Lillian Shandruck of Edmonton, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. William Barbour and the late Mr. Barbour of Victoria.

WAKE your sleepy appetite

Every morning eat the breakfast which does these three things

1. Gently WAKES "sleepy stomach". Doctors' morning appetite test: eight tempting foods. The rich goodness of crisp, golden Kellogg's Corn Flakes quickly starts your mouth watering—sharpens your appetite.
2. STARTS you quick. Once your appetite is whetted, breakfast should give you abundant "carbohydrate-fuel" to help you speed up quickly. Rich in energy-giving carbohydrate, Kellogg's Corn Flakes help give the drive that means days demand.
3. Helps KEEP you going. Don't spoil a good start by a mid-morning slump. Eat a satisfying breakfast. A brimming bowlful of Kellogg's Corn Flakes, with fruit, milk or cream and sugar, releases energy for hours . . . helps keep you going strong till noon.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes are so easy to serve that housewives call them "the Second Breakfast". Your grocer has Kellogg's Corn Flakes in sealed packages tomorrow. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Kellogg's CORN FLAKES

Dorothy Dix Says:

I have always contended that a great deal of misery and heartbreak for all concerned could be prevented if only men would try to find out, before they took unto themselves wives, whether they themselves were good matrimonial material.

Not every man thinks that he has the peculiar talents that fit him to be a successful lawyer or doctor, aviator, writer or carpenter, but apparently no man ever gives a thought to his qualifications for making a good husband, or even considers whether he will like the job or not. So the main reason why there are so many discordant homes and divorces is because many men rush blindly into a role for which they were not fitted by nature.

It is obvious that there are many good and worthy men who should never marry simply because they are not "called" to domesticity, as our Methodist friends say. It just isn't their vocation. Chief among these, of course, is the philanderer, the human butterfly who must always spend his life in flitting from flower to flower in the rosebud garden of girls. Always the fresh face tempts him.

Then there is the man who always has the call of the wild and whom no woman can housebreak or domesticate. His idea of home is a place to go when everything else is shut up.

There is the man who is too absorbed in his business to have any time or thought or attention to give his wife. And the ne'er-do-well who can't even support a canary bird who grows her own feathers. The grouch whose only use for a wife is for somebody who isn't big enough and strong enough to beat him up for saying to her the things he wouldn't dare to say to an ablebodied man.

There is the tightwad who begrudges the price of a home and family. And the drunkard and the gambler who drag the women who are foolish enough to marry them down into the pit with them.

None of these men should marry, not only because they should mercifully refrain from wrecking the lives of innocent women who have never done them any harm, but also because they would save themselves so much trouble, so much nagging, so many tears and reproaches. And so much alimony.

DOROTHY DIX.

Plan Breakfast For Dad As Father's Day Treat

A snack of good-will for Father—pears of endive stuffed with cream cheese and chives, sliced tomato, Norwegian sardines and crisp celery. Surprise him with this snack on Father's Day, and accompany it with a glass of cold beer or ginger ale. He'll like it.

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Next Sunday is supposed to belong to Father. Why not invite him to a long and leisurely breakfast around noon and plan to give him a regular man's breakfast?

Have his favorite newspaper folded by his place, cigars or cigarettes, according to his taste, and a very comfortable chair. Give him a regular time, and try to make him forget all the early morning snatched breakfasts he has eaten before he dashed off to work.

Here is a list of some of the things men like for Sunday breakfast, compiled by several chefs successful in catering to men's tastes. Men dote on: lamb chops, liver and bacon, broiled lambs' kidneys, kippered herring with scrambled eggs, dried beef in cream, butter cakes and sausage, creamed finnan haddie and, of course, codfish cakes.

CODFISH CAKES

One expert gives this recipe for his favorite fish cakes: "Soak dried codfish in water for about 15 minutes, changing the water once. Then to one part mashed potatoes, add two parts codfish and mix thoroughly. Add salt, pepper and a little grated nutmeg, just enough to give a faint flavor, and three raw eggs for each dozen cakes. Form into cakes and fry in butter. If you like them crisp, fry them in deep fat."

CRAB MEAT CAKES

(Serves 4)

Perhaps father is a crab flake fancier. In that case, serve him these very special crab meat cakes for his breakfast on Father's Day.

One pound crab meat, 1 onion, 3 tablespoons butter, 12 slices white bread, milk, 3 eggs, 1 teaspoon dry English mustard, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-3 teaspoon pepper.

Chop onion fine, then brown in the butter. Soak bread in milk, squeeze dry and add to onion. Cook about 15 minutes. Beat eggs with mustard, parsley and Worcestershire sauce. Flake crab meat.

Combine bread and onion mixture, egg mixture, crab meat and seasoning, and cook together 20 minutes. Then remove from fire, cool, and shape into cakes. Fry in butter until brown.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Sliced bananas, crisp bacon, wholewheat muffins, jam, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Kippered herring with scrambled eggs, sliced tomatoes, rolls, fruit bowl, tea, milk.

DINNER: Broiled beef steak, scalloped Bermuda onions and potatoes, buttered spinach, rhubarb tarts, coffee, milk.

What To Do

The other day I ordered ice cream and cake from the menu. The waitress brought the ice cream in a little saucer which was also on the plate that contained the piece of cake. She gave me only a spoon to eat it with. Was I supposed to take the little saucer out of the larger plate and eat the ice cream with the spoon and ask for a fork with the plate? Thank you.

MRS. L. L. M.

Answer—No, leave the ice cream saucer on the plate and eat the cake, unless very sticky, with your fingers. Another way would be to eat the cake and ice-cream alternately with the fork and spoon. But if you prefer to have the cake on a separate plate and eat it with a fork, then, of course, ask the waitress to please bring you a separate plate and fork. A spoon and fork supposedly always go with the dessert plate. But more generally than not, in public eating places, when ice cream and cake are served on the same plate, only a spoon is provided. Just how you eat them is a case of personal preference.

Tailored Woman's Dress . . . Cool and Crisp All Summer

We all know how useful and how charming a classic shirtwaist frock is for summer wear, and here is just the one you have been looking for. The flat pleats in the skirt add width to the hem line but at the same time are flattering, slimming lines. A sheer dark crepe with light or white dots will see you through many warm days. Also have a separate collar of white or that crisp-as-lettuce touch that is so becoming. For a more formal dress, one to wear in town shopping, choose a solid color flat crepe for smart tailored simplicity and complete satisfaction. The button down the front opening has many advantages especially in warm weather as it is easier to slip into.

Style No. 2780 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inch bust. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material and ½ yard of 35-inch contrasting.

Raising A Family

By ALICIA HART

Recently a surprised mother told me about her son. He is twelve and at the most curious stage of his life. It seems that Andy had learned to fix washers in faucets, take the electric iron apart and repair it, do things with the radio and sink "cups" of tea-food around the roots of the dying catalpa.

O R Barton

Just all at once it seemed to her, the boy had learned some sort of magic. Where and how he learned he was to explain.

"I go around with Tim," he said, "and he does odd jobs all over town."

"I was shocked," said Andy's mother. "Tim beats his wife, usually uses pretty strong language, and of all people he's no companion for a boy. But I said little then, because Andy had evidently discounted all Tims failings, and watched his work at pipe fitting.

Then Andy explained one day how he knew so much about radio. There was a young fellow in a second-hand shop there who puts old electric gadgets into shape, and Andy made a friend of him. He has taught the boy so much, but I was worried when my husband said he was a worthless scamp.

"However, it didn't seem to hurt the child. He was there to learn and the person who taught him seemed to have no effect whatever."

CHILDREN ARE FUNNY

"I suppose that if mothers knew about everything children did, they would be worried to death," she added. "But somehow they get more than they lose. Aren't children funny?"

Yes, children are funny. So funny, indeed, that if they did not rub shoulders with the world once in a while in their own way, they would be almost nonentities. That is what life is supposed to teach. To reach down into the ground for nuggets of gold and be able to select the best there is, no matter what the grime may be. Andy had picked up some valuable nuggets. He paid no attention to the source.

Sir Herbert Unable To Attend Functions

WASHINGTON, June 9—Because of illness, Sir Herbert Marler, Canadian minister to the United States, was unable to attend any of the functions of the Royal visit to Washington.

Sir Herbert, suffering from influenza all last winter, had a relapse Sunday and now is in bed with his condition considered fair.

Guard Your Daintiness When Weather Is Hot

By ALICIA HART

At this time of year, depilatories and deodorants take on a new importance. No girl can afford to be anything except downright meticulous about the use of both types of preparations.

Legs and underarms must be free from superfluous hair. It's important that you find a method of hair removal which suits you perfectly. And, with several excellent antiperspirants, which stop perspiration in the areas over which they are applied, on the market at reasonable prices, it's an easy matter to find a good one.

The majority of anti-perspirant liquids are to be used two or three times a week. Be sure to follow directions carefully, letting the liquid dry, then rinsing it off before dressing. A little simpler to use and equally efficacious is an anti-perspirant cream which is absorbed by the skin surprisingly quickly. And anti-perspirant pads in decorative little jars also are worth considering.

MANY DIFFERENT KINDS OF DEPILATORIES

Deodorants remove odor from perspiration, but do not check the normal flow of the moisture from the pores. One of these should be used twice a day. There are deodorant pads and lotions as well as creams and powders.

Among the good depilatories, there are hot waxes, creams and a wide variety of creams. Also an eraser disc which is becoming more popular by the day, and a brand new electric razor, designed especially for women. Whichever type you choose, do follow directions.

If you insist upon continuing to remove hair on your legs with an ordinary razor, do lather legs before beginning to shave, and apply cream or quantities of hand lotion immediately afterward.

Debunker

Contrary to many claims, there are no known drugs that have been found to actually create a person's appetite for alcoholic liquor.

Sweezey Appeal Is Dismissed By Privy Council

LONDON, June 9—The judicial committee of the Privy Council Thursday dismissed an appeal by R. G. Sweezey against Beauharnois Power Corporation arising out of a dispute over responsibility for a debt claimed by the estate of the late Winfield B. Sifton. Costs of action were assessed against Sweezey.

The judicial committee ruled that upon the death of Mr. Sifton, June 13, 1936, the liability to pay an additional fee of $40,000 ended. On this the judgment said:

"They lordships are unable to construe this contract otherwise than one under which an additional fee only became payable upon the finding that Sifton's services were available throughout the time the syndicates' work and efforts proceeded up to the passing and approval of plans by the Dominion government."

Minute Make-Ups

The bright sun of early summer can bring out those tiny wrinkles around the eyes, unless you take steps to prevent it. Smooth just the least touch of your eye cream over the sensitive skin very close to the eyes. Sun rays can't penetrate it, while it adds a dewy brightness.

Broomhall

Most shippers offers were slightly lower again yesterday, but European buyers remained indifferent and no sales of any importance were reported by any of the leading exporting countries. Arrivals at U.K. and continental ports continue liberal and apparently more than adequate to take care of immediate needs. Argentine wheat in nearby positions was offered at lower prices in Liverpool yesterday. There were indications of a possible break in the hot dry weather which has prevailed recently in Europe with rains reported in parts of France and unsettled weather predicted for Great Britain. However, yesterday's rains in France were restricted to a comparatively small area and many important sections are still in need of moisture.

DUMMIES USED FOR EVASION IN INCOME TAXES

CALGARY, June 8.—Miss Elizabeth Martell MacAskill, former employee of Imperial Oil, Limited, Thursday told the McGillivray Royal Commission probing Alberta's oil industry that the company used "dummy companies" to cover up income tax returns.

She recalled office practices which she termed "peculiar" and told of complaints from independent companies in their dealings with Imperial.

Miss MacAskill was named previously as being the person who told Leon L. Plotkins, Calgary refinery operator, that H. G. Nolan, counsel for Imperial and Royalite oil companies, had approached Calgary newspapers to "tone down" or "eliminate" reports of oil inquiry proceedings.

Mr. Justice A. A. McGillivray, commission chairman, reserved ruling on Mr. Nolan's request that representatives of the press be called to "clear his name".

Miss MacAskill, given protection of the Canada Evidence Act and the Alberta Evidence Act, said she worked with Imperial ten years, but that she was paid by an Imperial subsidiary, North West Company, Limited. When the income tax earnings slip for 1938 came through she was listed as an employee of the Imperial producing department, she said.

Questioned by Mr. Plotkins on the income tax returns, Miss MacAskill related that Imperial's head office (Toronto) had criticized the income tax returns sent in by the company. The producing department was a name only, she said, adding that "dummy companies were used to cover up income tax."

A Corker!

Strange are the ways of Mother Nature. Take the above, for instance. It's a radish grown in the garden of John Garneau, 11836 78 street, and the root grew right through a small cork. No, it wasn't from a bottle of Scotland's dew!

Moisture Conditions In Western Canada More Evenly Distributed Now

WINNIPEG, June 9—Moisture conditions in Western Canada's spring grain belt are more evenly distributed now than at any corresponding time since 1932, according to the second 1939 crop survey by the Winnipeg Free Press.

The report, issued Thursday, indicates that recent splendid rains completely altered the dry outlook which threatened western farms until the last 10 days of May.

Almost every district in Manitoba reports a good moisture reserve while Saskatchewan's former dry southwest is as amply supplied as any part of the prairies.

Apart from a section of the ranch lands, all Alberta has good moisture supply.

The only part of the crop area still short of moisture is southeastern Saskatchewan and a part of this district has enough for immediate needs.

Of 332 Western Canada points, 259 find moisture reserve good, 62 find it fair and only 11 describe it as poor. Only 33 points need rains within less than 10 days while 303 can carry on for a longer period.

Presence of grasshoppers is reported from many districts but little actual damage has been reported.

Estimates indicate a decrease of about 50,000 acres in the Western Canada area sown to barley this spring compared with 3,787,000 acres planted in 1938. Practically all of this decline is recorded for Saskatchewan.

UNITED STATES NAVY TO HONOR BRITISH KING

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The United States navy, host of the King and Queen today during a brief voyage down the Potomac to Mount Vernon, ordered greater honors for His Majesty than for its own commander-in-chief.

At President Roosevelt's direction, the salute of 21 guns customarily given the president and heads of other states was reserved for the King alone.

Ciano Leading Mussolini To Denounce Pact

LONDON, June 9.—The Daily Herald (Labor) reported today that Italian Premier Mussolini's son-in-law, Foreign Minister Count Ciano, is directing a "conspiracy" to lead Il Duce to denounce the Anglo-Italian accord of Easter, 1938.

The group headed by Ciano, the diplomatic correspondent of the newspaper wrote, is seeking to advance the German thesis that Britain violated the nglo-Italian pact by reaching an agreement with Turkey.

"Law Marches West"

William Bleasdell Cameron, Edmonton, former Athabasca druggist and only white man to survive the Frog Lake massacre in 1885, is very happy these days because he has learned that the King recently read and liked his book, "The Law Marches West." The book is based on the diary of Sir Cecile Denny, and the book was loaned to the King by Commissioner S. T. Wood, of the R.C.M.P. The King told an R.C.M.P. officer on the Royal train that he had read it with "great interest."

AUTO VICTIM DIES: DRIVER FACES COUNT

W. H. C. Kerr May Be Charged With Manslaughter, Foster Death

Without recovering from the coma into which he sank after being struck by an auto, allegedly driven by W. H. C. Kerr, R.R.5, Edmonton, last Monday about noon near the intersection of 124 street and 118 avenue, Robert "Bob" Foster, well known city specialty salesman, of 58 Brighton Block, died in a city hospital about 4 a.m. Friday.

Kerr is already before the court on a charge of dangerous driving and police stated that it is unlikely that any other charges will be laid until after the inquest, which will be held Monday.

In a statement made to police following the accident, Kerr said he was driving along 118 avenue and saw the man walking along the road about 150 feet ahead of him. The road was muddy and he reached up and attempted to rub some of the mud off the windshield.

WIDOW SURVIVES

While he was doing this he felt a bump. He then looked back and saw the man lying on the road, police said Kerr reported. They said he told them he was travelling between 15 and 20 miles per hour at the time.

Foster is survived by his wife. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p.m. Monday from Foster and McGarvey's chapel, with Canon C. F. A. Clough, pastor of the Red Chevron Club, officiating. Interment will follow in the Soldiers' Plot of the Edmonton cemetery.

Through The Mill

The old adage says that it takes all kinds of people to make the world, but when you do think how some folks act you wonder whether their kind of people are really necessary. One of this kind appeared in police court Friday on a charge of cruelty to animals. Constable Jack Irving, of the Calder detachment of the city police, told the court that following complaints from citizens in the district, he had gone to the man's address. There, in the barn, he found the body of a dog. A wire had been wrapped about its neck, and the loose end draped over a rafter in the barn. Then the wire had been tightened and the dog held with its rear feet just touching the floor of the barn, and it had struggled in that position until death mercifully ended its sufferings.

The cad imposed a fine of $15 and costs with the alternative of 21 days in jail.

Hollering "Heil, Hitler!" at the top of his voice at various parts of the parade route on royal visit day seemed like a swell idea at the time to a local Nazi boy. But police figured that he was just causing a disturbance, pointing out that he was lucky the crowd didn't tear him limb from limb. The court figured it was a pretty serious affair, too, and in police court Friday he was sentenced to 30 days in Fort Saskatchewan to think things over.

The Inquiring Reporter

Do you agree with the contention that due to quick communication of the telephone and telegraph, people have lost the habit of letter writing?

The Bulletin's Inquiring Reporter today set about gleaning a few opinions for himself on this question, and here are the results:

RUBY WILLIAMSON, business girl: I am of the opinion that letter writing has somewhat fallen off. For years it was one of the truly great arts, one that made possible great pieces of literature. Now, there is a tendency not only toward the more rapid type of communication, but also of abbreviating letters by sending postcards and prepared messages.

* * *

FRED OSBORNE, boxing instructor and promoter: There is no doubt that letter writing as an art is on the wane. But I hope it will be rewarded with a revival. Nowadays, telephone and telegraph communication have been brought within a reasonable price and business especially more inclines toward the more rapid type. I myself am less inclined to write letters than I used to be, and with the tempo of modern life, I am sure many others are similarly affected.

* * *

CECIL GOLDSTICK, sports coach: Letter-writing may or on the wane in some respects but it is still a major activity with the great human race. True, more rapid means have made inroads in letter-writing for business purposes and maybe to some extent in personal activities. But there are still plenty of letters written.

* * *

PHIL MAHER, typographer: I am afraid that I am one who prefers to do less writing and send my messages by the more rapid, if briefer, method. However, I realize that there are many who take the opposite view. I think it would be a good idea if universities taught the art of letter-writing along with courses on the proper use of the telephone, which is an important part of business courses. Writing is second only to speech as a natural means of expression and letter-writing is a medium which should not be permitted to die.

SOLVE ISSUES BY CONFABS SAYS VISITOR

Insurance Head Thinks East, West Should Hold Round-Table Parley

Hope was voiced here Thursday by E. E. Reid, London, Ontario, vice president and general manager of the London Life Insurance Company, that east and west could solve their problems if they consented to discuss them "across a round-table."

Accompanied by W. F. Thorne, London, Ontario, supervisor of industrial agencies, Mr. Reid came to Edmonton Thursday on a periodic inspection visit. They will leave Friday for Vancouver.

"I think that a better agreement could be reached between eastern and western Canada on many economic problems if they could talk over their difficulties in a friendly way across a round-table, instead of carrying on a long distance quarrel," Mr. Reid said.

Mr. Reid said that his company's business in Alberta was "very good" and that insurance conditions in Canada generally are holding "quite steady."

Rainfall in western Canada has brought new optimism to the west, Mr. Reid added. It had been impossible for him to fly from Regina to Saskatoon because of rain, and Mr. Reid said that the moisture was a welcome guest in the parched areas of the dust bowl in Saskatchewan.

"I hope the west doesn't become too optimistic, about present conditions, but all the rain is hopeful that this is going to be western Canada's year," Mr. Reid said.

FAG STUB IS SOUVENIR OF ROYAL VISIT

Souvenirs of the Royal Visit have ranged in a wide variety and Mrs. Hilda Pinter-Moss, formerly of Edmonton and now assistant secretary to the mayor of Vancouver probably has cut herself a slice of notice by grabbing the Royal cigarette stub.

When His Majesty, in Vancouver, took the last draw on his cigarette, she seized it and sealed it in an envelope on which she inscribed details of the illustrious "fag."

Mrs Pinder-Moss lived in Edmonton prior to 1920, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heathcote and a sister of Mrs. J. J. Walker, Mrs. E. Sillitoe and Mrs. James Murdock of this city.

COMMUNISTS TO NAME CANDIDATE EAST EDMONTON

At a meeting of the Edmonton city committee of the Communist party of Canada it was decided that steps would be taken to secure a federal candidate in East Edmonton who would represent a united front of all progressive groups.

Jan Lakeman, chairman of the committee, said that such groups as the C.C.F., Social Credit and Communists should jointly call primaries to discuss a program and choice of candidate. If such a procedure were adopted, he said, the Communists would name the candidate selected.

The meeting also decided to protest against the city entering into an interchange agreement with the Calgary Power Company.

New Road Urged In West Province

At a recent meeting of representatives of service organizations in northern Alberta and British Columbia the early completion of a 45-mile stretch of highway between Albreda and Blue River to complete an all-weather highway from Jasper to the Pacific coast was requested. The meeting was held at McBride, B.C. The meeting also passed a resolution asking that Mount Robson park be placed under the control of the federal government if it would agree to complete the road.

GOVERNMENT PROGRESS IS LAUDED HERE

Hon. D. B. Mullen and Orvis Kennedy Address Meetings

Defending the record of the present provincial government during the last three and one-half years, Hon. D. B. Mullen, minister of agriculture, told two meetings Thursday night that the government had accomplished more in its brief period in office than previous governments had in many years.

His addresses were given at the Polish-Canadian hall, 98 street and 108A avenue, and at the I.O.O.F. hall, Norwood. Premier and Mrs. William Aberhart attended the Norwood meeting. Both halls were filled to capacity.

KENNEDY SPEAKS

Mrs. E. H. Gostick, M.L.A. for Calgary, and Orvis A. Kennedy, M.P. for East Edmonton, was the main speaker at the Norwood meeting.

Mr. Mullen, in stressing the record of the present government, quoted figures to show how the Turner Valley oil and gas production had increased since 1935.

INTEREST BURDEN

The tremendous interest burden being borne by the people of Alberta has been slashed to about one half and instead of paying the money barons and coupon clippers about $7,000,000 a year in interest, this bill now had been reduced to half that amount, he declared.

It was contended by Mr. Mullen that the government could appeal to the people on its debt reduction and interest reduction policies alone and not be crippled by politics.

Mr. Kennedy dealt with the efforts of the Alberta social credit members of parliament at Ottawa to secure disallowance. He stressed the fight they were making for a revision of the economic system and a deep condemnation of the money financial fabric. The fight of the members in regard to the mortgage bank bill also was dealt with.

Mrs. Gostick dealt with legislative work and the efforts through social legislation and other means to improve the purchasing power of the people.

Campbell Returning

Now in Eastern Canada, Walter S. Campbell, executive director of the Alberta Petroleum Producers Association, who accompanied the government delegation on its mission to England, is expected to return with his wife to the city in a fortnight.

At least 100 municipal districts' secretaries are expected to attend the annual convention of their organization, to be held at the University of Alberta from June 12 to 14, inclusive. A refresher course will be held along with the convention. Arthur Walters, of Killam, is the secretary.

Resident of Edmonton for the past 27 years, William Purcell of 9633 108A avenue, died at the age of 66 years here Friday. Surviving are his wife, four sons, Edward and Andrew of Edmonton, Lewis of Jasper and Stephen of Banff; two sisters, Mrs. Kully of Santa Monica, California, and Elizabeth of Edmonton. Connelly and McKinley are in charge of arrangements.

Financial statement of expenses incurred in arranging Edmonton's welcome for the King and Queen is now being prepared, together with the revenue derived from the sale of bleachers, and other sources. Robert English, secretary of the royal visit committee, said Friday. He added that the statement has to be reviewed by Premier Aberhart and Mayor Fry and will likely be made public next week.

Appeal by B. A. Davis, Edmonton, against conviction by Mr. Justice Frank Ford on a charge of corruptly giving to RCMP. Const. Sidney M. Mullen a $100 and a bottle of whisky with intent to interfere corruptly with the due administration of justice, was dismissed by the Alberta court of appeal Friday morning. Davis, when found guilty by Mr. Justice Ford, was sentenced to serve three months in Fort Saskatchewan jail and pay a fine of $300, or in default a further term of one year's imprisonment.

Asked regarding any plans for a provincial election, Premier Aberhart declined to enter into a discussion, stating that there was nothing to say at the moment.

The Dominion election holds the key to the whole situation. It is generally believed in well-informed circles that the provincial government is anxious to go to the country ahead of the Dominion but only when the Dominion announces its date, will there be action in the province. Both must go to the country not later than next year.

Generally growing opinion is that the Dominion vote will be called in October, which might mean a prolonged session of Dominion parliament if the announcement of the Dominion appeal probably will not be made until well on in August.

ARMS IS NEW RELATIONSHIP FOR NATIONS

Maj.-Gen. Griesbach Urges 100,000 Militia Force For Canada

Even if there is no great war in the near future, relations between nations for many years to come will be upon the basis of armed strength, according to Major-General Hon. W. A. Griesbach, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., K.C. This necessitates the building up of Canada's militia force to 100,000 men and the erection of an armament industry in Canada.

General Griesbach returned to Edmonton early this week following the close of the senate sittings at Ottawa.

Commenting on Canada's defence policy General Griesbach stated:

COSTLY PROGRAM

"Canada has embarked upon an armament policy which is bound to run into many millions of dollars. In my view, the outstanding question is the inauguration of a sound system of control and management of our defence forces.

"We should profit by the experience of the last war and follow the methods adopted by the British government.

"As a matter of national policy we should aim to re-equip ourselves from our own industries and resources.

"We have in Canada the capacity, engineering skill, technical equipment and resources to build up our own armament industry, and by so doing, should make a substantial dent in our unemployed situation. Incidentally, we would be keeping our own money at home as well and would be building up at the same time for the rest of the British commonwealth a reserve of armament manufacturing.

NON-PARTISAN

"I need scarcely say that all these operations should be conducted on a non-partisan, non-political basis, with complete freedom from politics, patronage.

"It is distinctly up to the government, during the recess of parliament, to see that proper measures are taken.

"In the matter of increasing strength, the government must take steps to popularize the militia service. The government must be prepared to spend more money in the defence forces.

"At the moment, officers and men bear an undue proportion of the costs and expenses of the services, supplying their own equipment, clothes and the like in large measure.

"Employers should be induced to co-operate. In some, women could be utilized in this regard. In addition to expending more money on the militia, is the establishment of a public relations organization to assist in making the service more popular and in filling up its sadly-depleted ranks."

COURT RULES FATHER UNABLE BRING ACTION

The Alberta appeal court in an unanimous judgment handed down Friday by His Honor Chief Justice Horace Harvey, Hon. Mr. Justice I. Graham, and Mr. Justice [illegible] dismissed the six-months-long [illegible] of the city's dismissal from bringing action against the city for damages sustained in the death by drowning of Lloyd James, in the east end swimming pool, July 13, 1938.

Action was started by Mr. Graham as executor of his son's estate claiming $1000 damages from the city. The city, through its law firm of Milner, Steer, Pearce, Martland and Booker, in defence pleaded the limitations clause of the city charter.

Counsel for Mr. Graham submitted a reference to the appeal court on this point of law, asking for a declaration of the court that the limitation clause dealt only with damage actions arising from injuries received through accidents caused by ice and snow conditions.

In its judgment the appeal court finds that "it seems clear that at the expiration of six months after the drowning any right of action in respect of the accident became barred and as the action had not begun until after that period the plaintiff's right was barred." The action against the city was dismissed, the city [illegible] have costs if it desired to claim them.

Two-Year Sentence Is Suspended For Smoky Lake Agent

Two years suspended sentence was given H. V. Gavelin, Smoky Lake real estate agent on the Alberta court of appeal when he was found guilty of [illegible] on a charge of [illegible] evidence of the transfer of land.

The case came before the appeal court through appeal brought by the Crown against Gavelin in supreme court by Mr. Justice T. M. Tweedie, who held there was no guilty intent on the part of the accused and therefore there could be no conviction.

The appeal court held that the trial judge took the wrong view of the law in dismissing the charge on the ground the accused had no criminal [illegible] guilty intent adding that it found the accused technically guilty of the offence and released Mr. Gavelin on suspended sentence on his own bond of $2 000.

Their Majesties Swing Through Western Ontario in Triumph

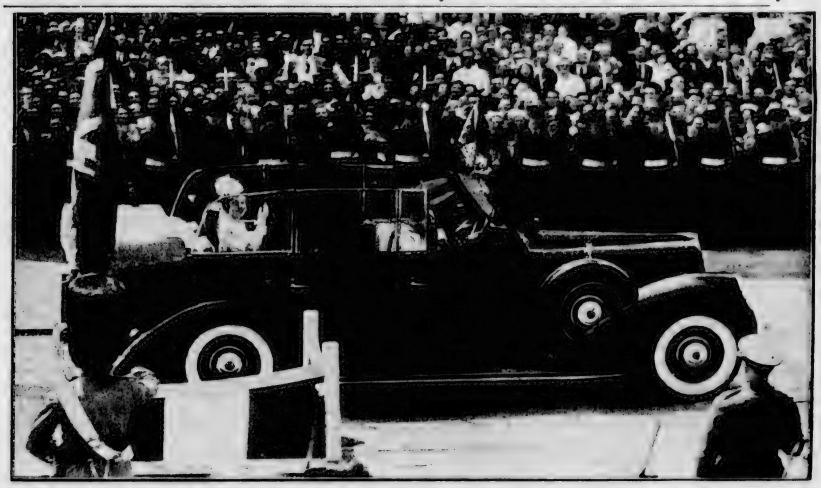

From the back of the observation car of the Royal train which has carried them to the Pacific coast and back, our King and Queen look out upon the rich farmlands and busy towns and cities of western Ontario. Every town and hamlet was gathered on a road thronged eager to cheer the King and Queen and to add to the glorious triumph of their progress across Canada and back. The Queen, radiant and happy, is carrying a bouquet received at one of the stops made by the royal pair. The King, attired in a business suit, stands just behind her.

Stratford Mayor Greets King and Queen

Under a canopy carrying the Royal cypher, Mayor Thomas Henry of Stratford, Ont. adds his city's greetings to the great pean of welcome that has been offered to Their Majesties in their visit to the Dominion. This is the historic and happy scene in the Classic City as the mayor was presented to the King and Queen.

Crowds Roar Acclaim in Forest City as Monarch's Car Rolls by

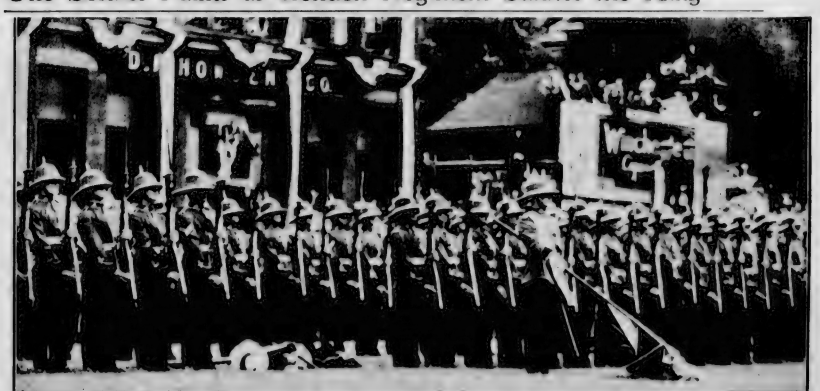

The population of London, Ont. was nearly tripled by the time the King and Queen reached the Forest City in their tour of western and southwestern Ontario. The big maroon car carrying the royal couple is pictured rolling along London's broad streets with the frenzied cheers of the packed crowds roaring in their ears and a busbied guard standing at salute in the foreground.

Seventy-five thousand people from the counties of Huron, Perth, Oxford, and other western Ontario centres, thronged into Stratford, Ont. yesterday to cheer Their Majesties in their arrival at that city. In this picture, Queen Elizabeth is shown greeting some of the disabled war veterans, for whom Their Majesties prolonged their stay at Stratford an extra five minutes.

One Soldier Faints as London Regiment Salutes the King

London, Ont. was suffering from a virtual heat wave when the King and Queen reached the Forest City, and one member of the guard of honor collapsed just as the National Anthem began and the colors were dipped in salute. Not a soldier moved a muscle until the anthem was concluded; then ambulance men carried the unconscious guardsman away. The soldier is shown in a heap while his comrades remain rigidly at the salute.

Junior Problems
Mercenary Mites
Possible Outs

THE men who guide the destinies of Junior hockey here will be keenly interested in just how Calgary proposes to work out its new deal with the Chicago Black Hawks for financial assistance for junior hockey. There's a problem involved that is as tough as a bride's pie crust.

Junior hockey all over Canada and especially in the west needs the sort of help that major league clubs can give, but the puzzle is how this help is to be given without wrecking leagues and making the final playoffs nothing but a battle between "romper" teams of the majors' farm systems.

There is a large part of the public and scores of officials who believe that the importing of stars and inevitable paying of them is outright professionalism that should not be tolerated in junior hockey. These people maintain that one of the major purposes of junior hockey is defeated when youngsters in their teens are infected with the pro slant and demand money in return for playing. When juniors take this attitude, it percolates right on down through the midgets and juveniles. Last winter there were several midget players here who dumbfounded team coaches by demanding cash for their services. Is sport to become a cold blooded profession, nothing more than another means of making money?

You might call that the psychological angle of the problem. In one way it is undoubtedly a result of the present scarcity of jobs in business and industry. Youngsters realize that their chances of getting a job when they leave school are none too bright. They are accordingly determined to capitalize right from the start on any ability which they can turn into cash. You can't blame them. The struggle for existence is becoming too bitter to take any chances.

It may not be a healthy condition when teen age kids look a coach coldly in the eye and flatly demand "how much dough?" but it is an inevitable result of junior hockey booming up into big money gates. With the exception of the Edmonton Grads, I don't know of any sport with big gate receipts where professionalism among the players is not rampant. Once the money is there, the players will soon demand a share of it.

What is to be done about stopping this almighty dollar complex forming in juniors is something I for one can't figure out. I am certain though that if jobs in business and industry were available for everyone after school or in the summer need of worry about the youngsters succumbing to the lure of the mighty dollar would be greatly lessened.

Will It Be One-Club Cities?

THE other side of the Junior hockey problem concerns league organization and operation. Edmonton has one junior club with major league affiliations. Calgary will have one this winter. Regina and Saskatoon are both hoping to put through affiliations and similar projects are reported underway in several other Canadian cities. The result is almost certain to be one picked all-star junior team for each city in the west.

Will it be possible to operate city leagues with this set-up—leagues in which any semblance of competition is preserved? You need at least three clubs for a league and it is going to be mighty hard to get two teams of almost-pure amateur juniors good enough to extend the all-star imports enough to draw any customers during the regular season. The two clubs of home-brews will get little or nothing of the big playoff receipts and they certainly can't operate through the season if the games aren't drawing fans.

One Possible Solution

I THINK one possible solution of this impasse was provided here last season by the Maple Leaf Athletic Club. This club comprises a group of men who are willing to dig into their pockets and produce enough money to keep a couple hundred kids playing hookey in the Junior, Intermediate and midget divisions. The Leaf Juniors incidentally showed up exceptionally well against the high powered E.A.C. squad.

It looks like other clubs in the west will have to organize sponsoring clubs similar to the Maple Leafs if city leagues are to be kept alive. Operation of a fast intermediate hockey loop here last season provided a happy outlet for surplus E.A.C. power. It was seldom that the full E.A.C. strength was thrown into a junior league game. However by playing part of the roster in the intermediate loop, the E.A.C. squad was kept right up to scratch.

I sometimes think that it would be better for everybody concerned if each major league hockey club undertook to assist an entire junior league in a city rather than one single team. The sponsoring N.H.L. club should be given some measure of protection on all players in the league in return.

Each major club could pick the city it chose to assist in. Then no junior from that city league could be put on the reserve list of another club without the sponsoring club having first chance at him. It looks as if this system would get more kids playing hockey, produce better competition and eliminate many of the abuses arising from sponsorship of a single team. It need not cost the sponsoring pro club any more money in the long run and probably less.

No More Racing for Him

After conflicting reports that had him first retiring to the stud and then ready to continue racing, it is established now that War Admiral, mighty son of the immortal Man o' War, will do the former after a brilliant career on American tracks that saw him run unplaced but once in 26 starts. He won 21 times and as a 3-year-old, in 1937, was undefeated as he won the American "triple crown," the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes. His most notable defeat was inflicted by Seabiscuit in the Pimlico match race last November. In all, the Admiral won $273,240.

Chicago Hawks to Help Calgary's Junior Hockey

CALGARY, June 9.—The Calgary junior, juvenile and midget hockey league has approved an offer from Chicago Black Hawks of the National League to support a junior team here next winter, said President Harold Brandreth Thursday.

Paul Thompson of Calgary Hawks manager, is working on a long-range plan to return Calgary to top flight junior hockey and develop players for the Hawks, Brandreth said.

Name of the junior team has not yet been decided, but the squad is expected to be entirely a Calgary one, he added.

Sam Timmins, former Pacific Coast League and American League professional, will coach the club in Calgary's effort to regain the Memorial Cup, emblematic of Canadian junior hockey supremacy, for the first time since 1926.

Both Timmins and Thompson were stars for the Calgary Canadians 13 years ago when they won the cup.

Singles finals are to be played over the week-end of June 24-25.

Entries close at 6.00 p.m., June 15, with C. Hunsley, 10043 108 street.

Eastwood Rangers Beat Bedding Boys

Eastwood Rangers scored a 10-2 triumph against Canadian Bedding at Boyle Street last night in a bitterly contested game in the Junior Softball League.

Both teams played good ball all the way. Rangers took a good lead in the first inning and held it all the way.

Pizzuto pitched a fiery brand of ball and had the Bedding boys under his thumb all night.

The first serious accident to mar the game this season happened last night when Delaney of Rangers had the misfortune to break his leg while sliding to third in the second inning.

As a correction to previous announcement, no junior game will be played Friday night as the Girls' League has the diamond at Boyle.

Score:

Canadian Bedding	100	000 010— 2
Rangers	510	101 20x—10

Bill Pollard and Sexsil; Pizzuto and McAuley.

Powerful Drivers Hit Low Figures

By BILL BONI

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—The big hitters put on a private party over the rolling, tricky Spring Mill course of the Philadelphia Country Club Thursday in the first round of the 43rd United States open golf championship.

Pacing the field for the first 18 holes with the day's only sub-par round was Sam Snead, the hill billy slugger from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who holds the Canadian open crown. Sam, last year's biggest money winner, posted a 68, one under standard figures, to lead by one shot.

Right on his heels came two other powerful drivers—Lawson Little, the former United States and British amateur champion and Canadian open winner, and Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., an amateur whose tremendous length enables him to play on virtually even terms with the top professionals.

Little and Ward were joined late in the day by one of the last starters, Matt Kowal of nearby Philmont, Pa.

HAD HARD LUCK

Their 69's—Little canned a 40-footer on the 18th for an eagle while Ward hung a 15-footer that would have tied Snead right on the lip of the cup—put them one stroke in front of a group that included Tommy Armour, Olin Dutra and Craig Wood, three veteran campaigners; Lloyd Mangrum, 24-year-old Los Angeles pro; Denny Shute, former British open and United States Professional Golfers' Association champion, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, who was runner-up to Shute in 1937.

Big Ralph Guldhal, the defending champion who hopes to set a modern open record with his third straight triumph, was well placed at 71, two strokes over par. For company he had Harry Cooper, ratbed one of his most dangerous rivals; Ray Mangrum of Oakmont; Amateurs Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., and Ed Meister, Yale captain-elect from Warrensville, Ohio, and Alvin (Butch) Krueger of Beloit, Wis., one-time pitcher in the Three Eye League.

ONLY CANADIAN

Kasmir Zabowski, pro from Pine Ridge, Man., and the only Canadian in the tourney, fired a couple of 41's for an 82.

Tuxis Softball Semi-finals Get Under Way at Vic.

Last night at Victoria High School grounds, the semi-finals in the City Tuxis Softball League got underway between the league leaders, Central Ahmeeks, and the third place Wesley T.G.S. In a fast and very interesting game, the Ahmeeks came out on top of a 4 to 1 score.

Warner pitcher sparkling ball for the winners, while Masson, MacBeth, Davies and Fratkin were the "big guns" of the evening.

LINE-UPS

Ahmeeks: J. Manson, D. Warner, J. Collier, F. Davies, Russ MacBeth, C. Carlyle, B. Torrance, C. Loughlin, E. Parsons.

Wesley: L. Attaic, K. Jamison, B. Foley, M. Nozick, M. Bloomfield, N. Taylor, E. Nix, B. Flavin, J. Stein, B. Fratkin.

The next game in this semi-final three series will be played on Monday at Oliver School at 7 p.m.

In the other semi-final round, Alberta College will meet Garneau All-Stars at Garneau Public School on Monday at 7 p.m.

CIVICS SEEK SATURDAY WIN FROM SCOTCH

Highly Favored Eleven Must Get Win In Order To Keep Pace

Civics, the team highly favored to take the Edmonton Football Association schedule easily and who are surprisingly only in second place, will be seeking needy points on Saturday at Clarke Stadium when they meet the Scottish United. It will be a scheduled game of the Edmonton soccer loop. The game will start at 7.00 p.m.

Heading the league standings is the surprising Scona eleven. The Scona boys are out in front by four points and scored their best triumph against Civics last Wednesday. Thus the Civics will seek their revenge out of the Scots and also hope to pull within two points of the Scona boys. But watch those Scottish, they haven't won a game this season, and this may be their turn.

Babe Siebert May Coach Canadiens

OLYMPIC COMMITTEE HANDS SWISS ULTIMATUM

Must Decide Today On Taking Games

LONDON, June 9.—The international Olympic committee delegates Thursday sent an ultimatum to the Swiss Olympic Association demanding the Swiss agree by noon Friday to hold the 1940 winter Olympics at St. Moritz "under our rules and instructions" or give the games to another country.

Swiss officials want the I.O.C. to make skiing a full competitive sport instead of an exhibition—a change the I.O.C. can't make without submitting to the International Ski Federation's demand ski instructors be permitted to compete as amateurs.

The vote will be taken on Switzerland's reply today. The delegates also will vote on location of the 1944 winter and summer games.

CANADA WANTS 1944 GAMES

Canada, anxious to get the 1944 winter games for Montreal, decided Thursday it would take the 1940 games on short notice but only providing this "does not prejudice our chances for 1944," William J. Northey, Montreal sportsman, said. The case for Montreal will be stated at today's session.

London and Rome asked for the 1944 summer games in Thursday's session. Lausanne and Detroit previously put their invitations before the committee. Athens, the only other candidate, withdrew.

Lord Aberdare stated the case for Britain. He said London hadn't had the games since 1908 and that the city got them only by accident then.

The Italian delegate said Rome never had the modern games and extolled "Mussolini's Rome" as a "city austere and magnificent, mystic and warlike, ancient and youthful—the city of the past and future."

Vancouver Sending Trio To Net Meet

VANCOUVER, June 9. — Three top-notch Vancouver tennis players will leave next week for Windsor, Ont., to represent British Columbia in the Canadian championships.

GUS JOHNSON PAT'S FIRST CHALLENGER

Wild excitement will again reign in the Memorial Hall tonight as Promoter Mike Cutcher headlines his bouts with a silver belt challenge joust between Champion Patrick O'Dowdy and Challenger Gus Johnson. The bout will start at 8:45 p.m.

Pat O'Dowdy, the rough and tumble Irishman will meet the best Seattle has to offer in the person of Gus Johnson. Johnson needs no introduction to Edmonton wrestling fans. He is known to be one of the best in the game, and will be able to show O'Dowdy a few new tricks even if O'Dowdy takes to shady tactics.

"Bad Boy" Bob Cummings will tangle with Jack Jackson in the semi-windup. Jackson has shown a lot of class since his return from England, and has asked for a chance at Cummings for a long time.

Popular Soldier Thomas will meet a newcomer, Ralph Loeffler. He has wrestled here two years ago. Ralph has been wrestling for that time in the United States. This bout should show plenty of action and scientific wrestling.

Leo Magirl will referee the bouts starting at 8:45 sharp.

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

STONY PLAIN, June 9.—On June 7 the Stony Plain senior baseball team visited Fort Saskatchewan and played a league game which resulted in a three-all tie after 10 innings of play.

The game was a good [illegible] and tuck throughout, and was called because of darkness.

Turner of the Fort umpired the first seven innings but a dispute arose and Larry Diamond took over the officiating. These two teams will meet at Stony Plain on Sunday, June 11.

A very important point is in[illegible] South was so worried over [illegible] opening bid that he took it upon himself to drop partner's forcing take-out short of game. If this were an isolated case it would not be worth reporting, but unfortunately the same situation has been brought to my attention time and again.

I cannot be too emphatic in stating [illegible] The fact that the opening bid was shaded has [illegible] bearing on the matter. The jump take-out, in this case the four diamond bid, is an absolute command and the partner who disobeys is a traitor to the cause. Strong words, perhaps, but I feel strongly on this subject. So, I imagine, did North when he found that seven spades was an absolute laydown on the combined hands and that he did not even made a game out of the largess bestowed by fate [illegible].

As a matter of fact, there was no reason for South to question his [illegible] bid. At [illegible] he was only a [illegible] short in so far as honor tricks were concerned, and his distribution was more than adequate compensation [illegible]. [illegible] A Q [illegible] A [illegible] diamonds Q [illegible] J 9 8 [illegible] he would have the full value for an opening bid [illegible]. SUPERSTITION

Any sensible person will say that superstition is all nonsense. But he'll knock on wood as he says it, if he's really sensible.

A black cat can be very, very bad luck—it's a menace, for instance.

A horseshoe on the ground can be very, very good luck—if you bet in another house.

Ladders always, within were thought to ride on broomsticks. People today know such ridiculous that no broomsticks are far too uncomfortable to ride on.

Your Favorite Poems Magic for Dull Days

Let Beauty In!

Suppose you were collecting the poems you like best—to cheer you in lonely hours, to comfort others. Which poems would you pick?

Surely that exquisite gem, "My Garden," by Thomas Edward:

Rose petal, frosted pearl . . ."

And the great poem by Richard Crashaw which has been set to music. Shane Watts do that or poems make. Now you have a garden!

Nor would you leave out "Worth While" by Ella Wheeler Wilcox:

". . . the man worth while is one
Who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong."

Or "The Weitward Prayer" by James Whitcomb Riley:

"Our simple home a place divine."

These and many more of the world's favorite poems are in our 32-page booklet. A fine collection.

Longfellow, Poe, Wordsworth, Burns many more—you'll learn to know and enjoy.

Send 10c in coins for your copy of Wanda Bentheard Hoover's booklet, Home Service Bulletin, Home Service, Edmonton Alberta. Be sure to give your name, address, postal zone number, and the name of booklet.

1,000 BRITONS IN WASHINGTON MEET RULERS

King and Queen Pass An Hour Among Them At Embassy

By A. E. FULFORD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 8.— A thousand members of the United States capital's British colony cheered almost constantly today as King George and Queen Elizabeth paused an hour among them in the sun-lit, tree-studded garden of the British embassy.

At first the Queen, in a white silk frock trimmed in silver bending at the neck and a large white picture hat, remained on the terrace with Lady Lindsay, while the King, Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay and military attaches moved among the double line of notables. All Great War veterans, many of whom are Canadians.

KING FEELS HEAT

The King seemed to be feeling the heat as he moved in the garden among the guests. The Queen, however, remained cool and as dainty as ever.

A short while after the arrival of Their Majesties, the veterans set up a shout for the Queen and she moved from the terrace and strolled in their midst.

In the garden Her Majesty observed a child about three years old on a Scottish Highland costume. She motioned for the child to be brought over.

The little girl's name was Isabelle Kinloch and she formerly lived in London, Ont. Her mother urged her to curtsey while the Queen smiled down on her curly fair head. Isabelle, however, picked up the hem of her plaid skirt and tucked it in her mouth. The Queen laughed, put out her right hand and the child put her left one in it.

Approximately half the people at the reception were Canadians, but many other parts of the Empire were represented. For instance, there was John Karefa of Sierra Leone, in west central Africa, in his full native costume. Karefa's grandfather was head of the Sherbro tribe there and the young man is studying medicine at Ohio State University.

CHATTED WITH BANDMASTER

The Queen also chatted with Bandmaster Leonard Bagley of the British ship Queen Exeter, whose band supplied music.

"How long have you been away from home?" the Queen asked.

"Two and a half years."

"Are you homesick?"

"Yes," answered the bandmaster. Americans who fought with the Imperial and Canadian forces in the Great War also were greeted by the King.

V.C. PRESENTED

Only holder of the Victoria Cross present was Dr. Belleden Seymour of Toronto, Cairo, Ill., who served as a medical officer with the 73th Canadian Battalion.

The first veteran in line to be greeted was Majesty was A. E. Graham of Washington.

"How long have you been over here?" the King inquired.

"I am an American," said Graham, who was standing with the aid of a crutch and a cane to make up for the loss of his left leg.

"In what outfit did you serve?" "With the Eighth Canadian Infantry, Sir."

"And where did you lose your leg?"

"At Amiens, in 1918, Sir."

As the reception ended with "God Save the King," the crowd in the garden broke into three spontaneous cheers.

96 More Hapless Jews Are Refused Landing In Cuba

HAVANA, Cuba, June 9.—Havana became a port of despair for 96 more Jewish refugees aboard the French liner Flandre Thursday when they were told they could not land in Cuba because their papers were not in order. They previously were rejected at Vera Cruz, Mexico.

A precedent which boded ill for them was set when Cuba refused to permit 922 Jewish exiles aboard the German liner St. Louis to land, even temporarily. The St. Louis cruised idly off Bermuda today, while those aboard hoped some American country would receive them.

49 Different Languages Spoken

Lack In Peace River

MIDLAND, Ont., June 9—Rev. C. E. Fisher of Grande Prairie, Alta., reported a lack of sufficient men in the Peace River field to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada last night.

"There are now in the Peace River area 49 different languages spoken," Mr. Fisher said. "The first Presbyterian mission-ary was sent in 1908, and now we have eight churches along both sides of the area.

"But we haven't the men. We have only three ordained men, a deaconess and a W.M.S. nurse. At Fort St. John we built a church two years ago and we haven't a man for it yet."

There has been no grain crop in the district for two years, Mr. Fisher reported, and "we have discovered children whose only clothing was gunney sacks." The district has taken in 100 refugee families from the Sudeten area.

"We need ordained men," he appealed. "God give us men—men who are not afraid of being counted failures because they have to live the simple life. That's all we ask for."

Reporting on a survey made by Rev. Thomas Murphy among isolated Presbyterian families in the west, Rev. Gordon S. Bailich of Wilkie, Sask., said something must be done to guarantee ministers in the west a livelihood "and to protect them from the possibility of having to pay their own rent."

"Financial difficulties have overcome more men than other difficulties in the field," he said.

KATHIE'S FINE SCORN SCARES AWAY THIEF

NEW YORK, June 9—Katherine Hepburn, the actress, disclosed today that she chased a burglar from her town house after he awakened her from a nap last evening. Her shout "What the hell are you doing there?" so unnerved the man, she said, that he dropped a pearl necklace and a heavily-loaded jewel case and fled.

HITLER HOARDS FOODSTUFF FOR NEXT CONFLICT

Necessities Of Life Now On List Of Scarcities

NEW YORK, June 9—A wordpicture of a young Nazi so elated at having a pork chop for dinner that he gleefully waved it over his head was given today by Louis P. Lochner, veteran Associated Press foreign correspondent, as an illustration of Germany's economic pinch.

Arriving with Mrs. Lochner aboard the liner Washington on a vacation trip, the chief of the A.P. bureau at Berlin and recent winner of the Pulitzer prize for foreign correspondence said:

"Hitler's government is hoarding foodstuffs for the next war — and the German people are feeling the shortage. It isn't a question of malnutrition, but you never can tell what you're going to get for dinner, or how much."

Coffee, butter, pork and eggs are on the list of necessities he said, while the government's highly organized propaganda machine, explaining these restrictions, constantly emphasizes to the people that Germany was beaten by economics in the Great War and "it must not happen again."

Lochner said the general feeling in well-informed quarters was the next European crisis would not develop until mid-August.

Assassination Plot

MONTPELIER, France, June 9— A one-armed Spanish youth was under custody today while police investigated a note found in his possession which they said indicated a possible attempt to assassinate Manuel Azana, who was president of republican Spain. The prisoner, Apolinar Moreno Borrador, 22, admitted the nationalists of General Franco in the civil war.

An 8-year-old kid who made a hole-in-one at golf is named Peter Toogood. Yes, he is.

3 KILLED AS AUTO CRASHES INTO 2 TREES

BLENHEIM, Ont., June 9—Three Michigan residents were killed last night when their automobile plunged into two trees after a front tire burst on highway number three, two miles east of here.

Mrs. A. Gilliland of Highland Park, and Mrs. Reta Woods, Detroit, died in the wreckage.

Mrs. Woods' grandson, Robert William Lee, eight, of Detroit, died on admittance to hospital at Chatham, 10 miles north of the accident.

BABE SIEBERT IS NEW COACH OF CANADIENS

MONTREAL, June 9—Alberta (Babe) Siebert will coach Montreal's National Hockey league Canadiens in the 1939-40 season, while Tommy Dugal will act as business manager, Club President Ernest Savard said today.

Siebert, defence star who joined the Habs in the 1927-28 season, will retire from active play to take over the coaching post, it was announced. Dugal, a native of Detroit, who handled the club for part of the 1938-39 schedule after Cecil Hart relinquished the managerial reins.

King and Queen Mix With Guelph Throng

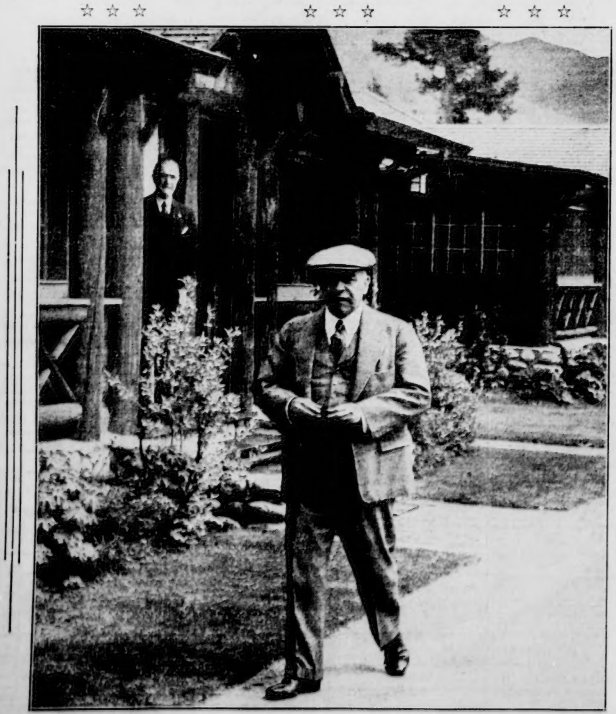

Their Majesties are shown in the midst of a welcoming crowd at Guelph. At the right is Mayor W. G. Taylor of Guelph, while directly behind the Queen, who is dressed in pink and is shown carrying her silver parasol, is Mrs. Taylor. The King and Queen also chatted with war veterans during the short stay.

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Arriving at Guelph, Ont., in their swing through western Ontario, the King and Queen showed special interest in the gathering of Great War veterans drawn up to greet them. Here Their Majesties are pictured with the old soldiers.
